"Get Together." Would it not be a good idea for the real estate men of this part of Platte valley, say from Columbus as far west as Grand Island, to organize themselves into a real estate association, similar to that of a real estate association, having for its object concerted action toward showing the people of the country at large the magnitude of the advantages which this section of the great west has to offer in the way of cheap and fertile lands? A good plan is to form a stock company, the money received from the sale of stock to be used in advertising purposes. There are many men not engaged in the real estate business, but who own land, or who otherwise are interested in the up-building of the country, who could well afford to take stock in an enterprise of this sort for the benefit of the country.

We have as fine a country right here in the heart of Nebraska as the sun shines upon; all we want is more people to make it a veritable garden. We want tillers of the soil, men who are willing to delve into our rich soil and bring to the surface the husbandman's brow bringing to the surface the fabulous wealth that lies hidden there, ready to be won. We do not want an artificial boom, and none of the towns within the limits named, have any diamond-studded town lots in addition several miles from the town. We want men who will come to the eastern suburbs at fancy prices. There is not a town from Columbus to Grand Island but can stand on its own bottom. The country that surrounds each of our cities is a magnificent field of opportunity and ultimate prosperity.

It is only a question of more or less time when things will be brought to the notice of the world, the problem is simmered down to this: Shall we allow opportunity, now that it is within our grasp, to escape us and return to be grasped by the more enterprising generation to succeed us? There are practically no conflicting interests to hinder Platte, Merrick and Hall counties from joining hands and working in a common cause, and our real estate men and land owners are proper parties to take the movement "Get Together, boys, and see what can be done." A few thousands of dollars expended in the right place for advertising purposes would accomplish wonders, and by getting the railroad interested it would not be so difficult a matter to raise the money.

The Central City Nonpareil, from which we clip the above, talks good, strong common sense, which always approves itself to JOURNAL readers. Now is the time to do what we can toward securing the breaking up and cultivation of every acre of land in this section of country, thus building up home markets. Each of these towns has a radius of country tributary that, if properly put under cultivation, cannot be taken away by means of cross railroads or by rival towns, and it is wonderful that all that has made Nebraska what she is. We can double, triple, quadruple our retail market just so soon as these lands are settled upon and cultivated, and year by year, their value as a foundation for a city's prosperity, will become more and more apparent.

As the Nonpareil says, we need no balloon inflation, only straight business. Let us develop all our natural resources at the earliest practical moment. Tactics of Tariff Reformers. Under the promise of getting more American products into foreign markets the free trade preachers urge that all barriers against foreign competition shall be removed from our home market. The unfairness, the hollowness of their proposal becomes apparent when all the facts of the situation are given consideration. Our home market is the best in the world; best, not only for the reason that our people are the most liberal buyers in the world, but for the further reason that it is the only one in which they can trade and have all the profits of the transaction inure to the national wealth. The proposal is further unfair because it demands the giving of a certainty for an uncertainty—a consideration of tangible and enormous value for a chance to contest for something already in the possession of commercial rivals. European nations, whose teeming people crowd the narrow margin between poverty and starvation, already have subsidized lines of ships pushing the products of their factories and mines into the harbors of every foreign country able to buy anything. To secure any portion of this trade Americans must supply similar products for less money, or better ones for prices now paid Europeans. The fact that their customers in our countries are unable or unwilling to use and pay for the products already available is what occasioned the solicitude of European manufacturers for a better hold on the markets of the United States. Not content with the nearly $100,000,000 worth of manufactures annually sold here, they seek to still further supplant domestic labor in supplying the wants of the American people. The fact that this would give work to idle people in foreign lands and profits to foreign capital, is with them a potent argument, while that other fact, that increased foreign purchases means enforced idleness for thousands in this country, is deemed to be outside of those results they are called upon to consider.

Not content with the decision against free trade laws, the champions of this unpopularity policy have begun agitation for a reversal of the verdict in favor of giving the people of this country the first right in their own markets. Without regard to consistency in their pleas, these crusaders are again seeking the ears of those who so lately repudiated their teachings. While one set respects to the former that competition in foreign markets will swell the prices of his products, another assures the mechanic that free trade will enable him to live cheaper, notwithstanding the fact that the greater part of his expenses is for what must be bought from the farmer. One "reformer" will tell the wool grower that under free trade the price to manufacturers will insure higher prices for wool, while another goes to the laborer with the promise that free wool will bring cheaper clothing. Anything to secure a reversal of last year's verdict at the polls. It remains to be seen whether this effort will be more successful than the multitude of its predecessors. —Nebraska Farmer.

Republicans Speakers in the South. The Daily States, of New Orleans, is not pleased with the presence of Congressman Burrows of Michigan, Congressman Rowell, of Illinois, and Congressman Peters, of Kansas, in the Third Congressional District of Louisiana during the contest now in progress between Mr. Price, Democrat, and Mr. Miner, Republican.

THE FREMONT Herald rightly remarks that Nebraska soil should be utilized for something besides hay and 30 cent corn, and advocates the sugar-beet industry. Correct, brother. No use buying sugar abroad, when we can raise just as good at home, and thus keep that much money where it will do most good.

THE U. S. senatorial investigation into dressed beef transportation, taking place last week at Chicago is likely to result in some good, even if a negative sort. It has been impossible for the committee to secure the attendance of Swift or Armour, even after promises by both that they would attend and testify. Senator Vest made public the telegram he had received giving a little insight into the matter: "Freeland, Pa., Dec. 18, 1888.—Can't allow Schwab to continue killing live stock. He will not stop make other arrangements, and make the price we can get his trade. Armour & Co."

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., has almost a parallel of the Wichita Brown mystery, so far as a sudden disappearance and continued and inexplicable absence are concerned. Last Sunday one week ago Mr. E. O. Webster, who resided in a suburb an addition to the city, left his home to go to the Baptist church, located in the central part of the city. Since that time nothing has been seen or heard of the missing man. The most careful search has utterly failed to lead to the slightest clue to his whereabouts, or explanation of his continued absence. The case is assuming an alarming phase, there being no possible reason suggesting itself which will clear up the case.

A PENNSYLVANIA editor answers a correspondent who propounded the query, "Did you ever see a bald-headed man?" in the following strain: "No; we never did. Nor did we ever see a woman walking around town in her shirt, with a cigar between her teeth. We never saw a woman go fishing with a bottle in her hip pocket, sit around on the damp ground all day and go home 'boozed' in the evening. Neither have we seen a man yank off her coat, spit on her hands, and swear she could whip any man in town. All the foregoing 'privileges' are reserved for men."

THE BEST things known to man have come when the indefatigable crusader was working for something else. It seems to me that great attention should be given to the development of the natural resources of the country, and a persistent, systematic, scientific method adopted. Otherwise we will have to continue, as heretofore, to stumble along, satisfied with an occasional, and, as it were, accidental find. These words are suggested by the fact that last Tuesday at Duluth, Minn., "a blast was touched off where workmen are excavating for the basement of the new Presbyterian church and a large amount of rock was discharged, disclosing an immense piece of fossil or native copper surrounded by a large vein of what miners call gray copper. It is evidently part of the same vein which was struck some months ago when excavating for the Masonic temple. Its course will be traced outside the city limits, and if it holds out, mining operations will commence at once."

THE PRESIDENT on Friday settled one of the hardest fought contests for an office that has yet been fought before him, by the appointment of Frank P. Clark to be collector of customs at El Paso, Texas. There were thirty-seven candidates in the field for this office and each of them has been, since the fourth of March "hustled" as only a Texan knows how to "hustle" to "get there." A fire broke out in a barn belonging to Rev. Andrews at Blue Springs, a suburb of Wynote last Tuesday afternoon. Two children of David Gay, aged three and four years, were in the barn at the time, and the general supposition is that they were playing with matches in the hay loft. The little fellow was ground into this narrow space in such a manner as to severely bruise him and to break his right leg in three places—twice above and once below the knee. What a pity it is that Schuyler does not take pattern from each city as Kearney and Fremont and do something in the way of establishing industries. Fremont can point with pride to a mammoth creamery, a large foundry, a tinning factory, a canning establishment, a carriage factory in process of construction, a packing house doing a good business and several minor industries. Kearney has a paper mill, one or two other factories the names of which have escaped our memory, and now a contract has been let and signed for the erection of a cotton mill which will be one of the largest factories of any description this side of Chicago. This mill will require upwards of 800 hands and will have a payroll running up into the thousands. Such enterprises as this mean the addition of two or three thousand to Kearney's population during the next year and several millions in wealth. By the enterprise and public spirit of her citizens in this respect Fremont has doubled her population in five years and placed her welfare upon a solid foundation which can never be injured. Shall we always remain inactive in this respect? The Sun hopes not. There is yet time to mend. Let us do something. —Schuyler Sun.
