—Robert Kummer gave me a very pleasant visit a few minutes Saturday afternoon. In answer to our questioning he related many incidents of his trip to Europe whence he returned Saturday week. He was eleven days going over and seven days coming home, returning the ship Burgoyne having a crew of 264, 1,400 passengers, and using 280 tons of coal a day, the highest distance made in a day being 406, the lowest 417. Speaking of the recent storm at sea, which they did not encounter, he said that the evidence of destruction was numerous and that fifty vessels must have gone down. Of course he was at the exposition at Paris and saw the Wild West and his old Columbus acquaintances, Fred Matthews and George Turner, whom he reports as well and who regard him as a good fellow.
