He went on further to show his position on all vital questions, particularly on overhauling the records. During his speech the farmers saw in him an honest, cape ble man. Honking will without doubt poll a large vote in Grand Prairie town

Martin Bloedorn, being called upon esponded by saying that his record for the past two years was before the people and if he had performed his duty well he hoped to be re-elected; if not he wished to be defeated. His candid manner of expressing himself on all questions will make him many votes. Caldwell seemed frustrated when he arose and could only appeal to the democrate to stand by their ticket and he would be all right.

Prof. Cramer came forward at calls rom the audience and offered his record for the past two years as county superintendent for the suffrages of the people for re-election and pledged himself for the future, as in the past, to strictly follow the sprit and intent of the law to the best of his ability. His address was cholarly, short and to the point. Becher's address received loud applause He stated that he would pursue the same course in the future, if elected county tressurer, as he had done in the past: that he was willing to have the light of an expert examination shine upon his transactions.
