Hastings, too, wants the state fair, but she is too far west and too far south. Besides, she has not the railroad facilities for reaching every point of the compass that Columbus has.

Work for the location here of the Nebraska state fair for the next five years. Every property owner within a radius of twenty miles is deeply interested in seeing it located here.

The North Nebraska Veteran, published by C. E. Fields at Norfolk, is a new candidate for public favor. It starts out very creditably, advocating the just claims of the old soldiers for recognition in the struggle of life.

We think it will be no fault on the part of Columbus if she does not secure the location of the state fair for the next five years. Tomorrow (Thursday), evening, a meeting of citizens generally, everybody interested in the matter, is called to convene at Fitzpatrick's hall, and it is desirable that everybody be present.

It is well worth striving for. There are innumerable reasons why the state fair here would be a good thing, for the next five years, and may be longer.

It will enhance the value of every acre of land within a radius of twenty miles. The city will be advanced everywhere by the railroads that center here, and their 'harvest excursions' (found so profitable that they are certain to be continued) will have this as their objective point: prospective settlers, and purchasers of western lands will thus be attracted hither by hundreds and thousands, and seeing our fair country, will come and dwell with us or invest some of their surplus funds, thus bringing more of our fertile soil under cultivation, and interest more people in the quick development of our natural resources.

These are the considerations that ought to weigh most with all of us. Some eyes that read these lines have seen nearly the whole of this region when there were very few acres under cultivation, and so many, all told, in acres and scores of counties (now marked out), as are in any one season now rescued from the prairie soil.

The progress has been marvelous, but an opportunity offers, and if we grasp the situation firmly and unitedly we may demonstrate a greater development here in the next five years than the most sanguine of us could long point.

Fortune comes to them who likewise do their part. Be sure to get to the meeting. A Good Start.

According to previous announcement, a meeting of the Platte Farmers' Club was held last Friday at Fitzpatrick's, J. S. Truman acting as chairman and B. S. Dickinson as secretary.

The meeting, as stated by J. H. Beed, was the organization of farmers' clubs in the county, and the holding of county farmers' institutes.

After a few remarks the meeting was adjourned to 1:30 p. m., at which time a motion prevailed to hold an institute for Platte and adjoining counties. The committee on arrangements appointed were: J. H. Beed, J. C. Swartley, A. W. Clark, J. S. Freeman and A. H. Ives; on finance, G. C. Barum, O. D. Butler, A. C. Pickett; on constitution and by-laws, Wm. Meays, A. C. Pickett and C. F. Brown; to report at next meeting, J. C. Swartley read a paper on the topic: 'Can hogs be raised at a profit, for three cents a pound?' Mrs. J. H. Beed, a paper on raising pigs. Both were well received.

An invitation by D. Schipbach to attend the meeting of citizens and the board of trade to discuss the location of the state fair at Columbus, was accepted, and it was declared as the sense of the meeting that every possible effort should be put forth to secure the location for Columbus.

The next meeting is to be held at Fitzpatrick's hall next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at which time, besides the report of the committee on organization, will be a paper by S. O. Baymond on an outline of the state, and by J. H. Beed, another on tame grasses.

H. H. Hewitt gives a glowing picture of farm matters in his neighborhood, Shelby. There are thousands upon thousands of bushels of corn in the elevators and on the ground.

Often there are as many as thirty-five loads of corn standing at once for unloading, and sometimes nearly that many have had to wait over night. Mr. H. gives us a little of his experience in raising clover.

In 1884, on ten acres, he seeded down clover and barley, for use as a hog pasture. After the grain was two inches high, the hogs were turned in, and taken out again in July, for fear they would take to rooting.

The next season he cut two tons of excellent hay to the acre. He thinks that clover ought to be allowed to go to seed here every other year, and that in that way, the soil can be kept permanent.

Some of his neighbors have good pastures eight years now from their first seeding down, and they regard the red clover as at least double the value of prairie grass for milk cows.

In their neighborhood there is no such thing as questioning the success of Mammoth red clover, because there it is, and there it has been for years.

This he told us, Mr. Hewitt, in worth thousands of dollars to Nebraska, if followed up by others. It pays to know such things.

A Serious Aftry. Thursday last while John M. Oury and Charles Stenzel were playing a game of pool at D. H. Carrig's saloon in Platte Center, Tom Morrisey stepped in and wanted to take part in the game.

Oury told him they would be through directly, and then they could play all he wished. This angered Morrisey and he began to use abusive language at Oury, and the latter struck him with the butt end of the cue he had been using, above the ear on the left side of the head.

He fell to the floor, unconscious, and was afterward removed to Scheide's hotel and placed in the care of Dr. O'Key. At last accounts, it was thought he would recover.

Oury, who is sixteen years old, is a brother of Rev. Oury of Joliet, and doesn't feel very pleasant over the notoriety that his impulsive deed has given him.

Oury had his hearing before Judge Hudson Monday and was held to bail to the district court, in a bond of $500.

COLUMBUS, NEB., Dec. 30, 1888. Received of F. W. Heinrich, insurance agent, two hundred and twenty-five ($25) dollars in full payment of the loss of my house and household goods which were destroyed by fire on Dec. 9th, 1888.

He was soliciting signatures for the purpose of forming a sort of association; the members who would each pay so much per month for a report of all chattel mortgages, real estate sales, and mechanics liens placed on file and of all releases made. It is doubtless a good thing for some.

Miss Alice Matthews and Enla Rickly went to Fullerton last week to visit Mrs. George McKelvey. Miss Bessie Whitney of Columbus, is spending the holidays at this place. (St. Edward Eagle). Rev. Taaker and wife of Linwood came over last week to visit with son, J. E., during his serious illness.

Mrs. McDermid and Mrs. David Smith returned Friday from a visit to Ben Roehen's family in Octavia. Gns G. Becher, treasurer of Platte county, was in our city for the first time Thursday last. (Newman Grove Era). Miss Lizzie Sheehan, who is teaching school near Platte Center, is spending her Christmas vacation at her home in this city.

Misses Birdie and Nora McConiff, who have been visiting the family of J. R. Meagher, returned to their home in Lincoln yesterday. Miss Ida Meagher was on the sick list last week with the prevailing influenza, and she was the holder of a much milder type in Nebraska than elsewhere.

H. C. Hockenberger and family and E. C. Halm and family of Platte Center spent Christmas at Grand Island with Mr. Ed. Hockenberger's family. J. C. Worley, editor of the York Star, was in the city Sunday, visiting his brother, Rev. Worley. He returned home Monday. Willie goes this week to visit his friend.

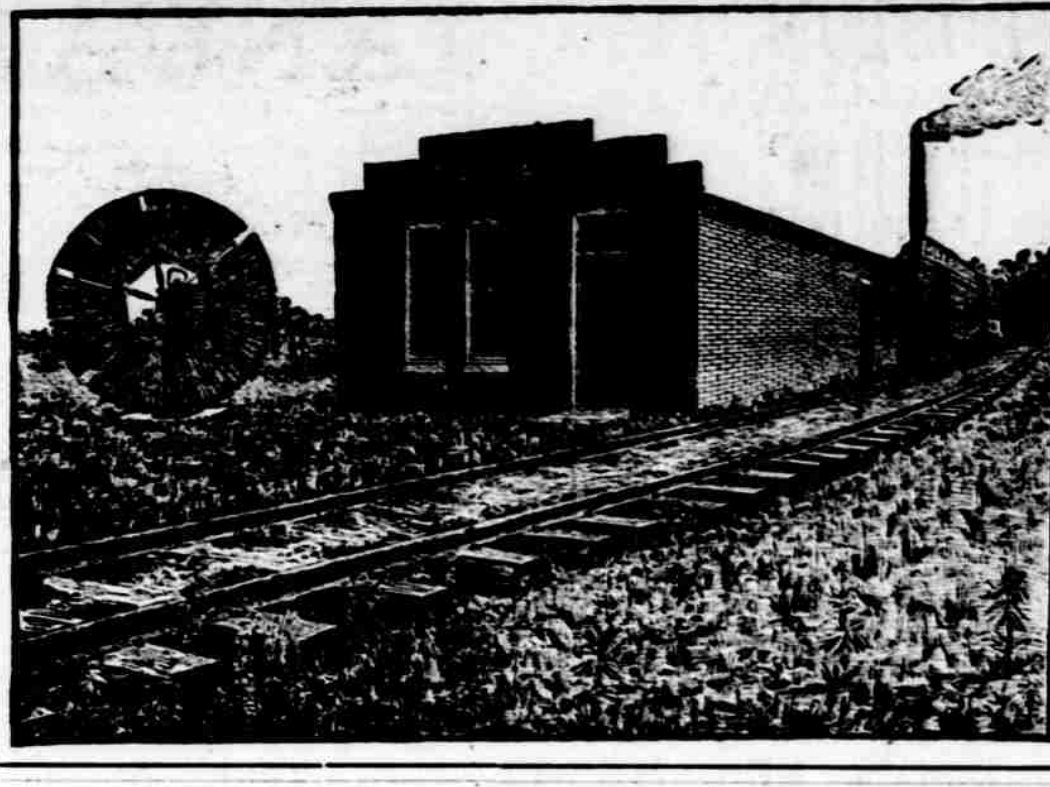

Our old friend, Peter Myers, for several years past a resident of Lincoln, is very sick, with Bright's disease. He was confined to his bed for two weeks, and became slightly better, but had a relapse Saturday last, and the worst result is feared.

W. B. Albro received a letter last week from one of his old army comrades, Frederick Zuber, of South Aniana, Ia., concerning whom he had not heard anything since, as prisoners of war, they were comrades together at Pearl River bridge, Miss. Five were taken, sick, and died of them were quarantined, to the Dixon House. Mr. Albro and his friend Zuber were the only ones who survived the sickness, and until lately each supposed the other dead. Recently while applying for a pension, Mr. Albro mentioned the name of his old comrade to special Examiner Noble, and through him, the recognition came, after twenty-six years. Among other things the old soldier writes: 'Fate has separated us for a quarter of a century, and an ardent longing to see and converse with my old acquaintances has arisen in my breast, and prompts me to write to you since I found out where you live.' In warmest wishes he wishes his former companion in arms health and prosperity. Those who marched together, shared each other's bunk at the barracks, read each other's letters from home, divided their rations and cared for each other when sick or wounded; who suffered the pangs of hunger in prisons, and together saw their dead comrades carried out for burial and daily looked for their own; have a bond of union no others can well know.

A Bad Collision. Friday night at about five minutes to ten an east-bound freight train, engine No. 777, engineer Gogan, ran in on a siding west of the coal chute, and collided with the switch engine, manned by engineer Guinan, the freight engine going into the ditch. As nearly as we can learn, the switch should not have been left open by the yard men. It seems that the east-bound train was not expected for an hour, by them, however.

Both engineers, after giving warning and reversing their engines, jumped and saved themselves. Nobody was hurt, but the freight engine looked as though it was damaged considerably.

The wrecking crew were promptly at work early Saturday morning and the main line was very soon cleared again. The total expense to the railroad company will probably be seven or eight hundred dollars.
