The Columbus post office has a hab of getting moved (when it does go), suddenly. Of course this is done for the good of the patrons of the office, but quite a number of these who generally keep well posted on occurrences, were at the old place Sunday morning to find that during the previous night the trans- business up there. | Schuyler Quill. fer had been made to the new brick office, on North street, one door south of Rorer & McDill's hardware store. We suppose, from appearances, the post office will be run as a separate and distinct business, without any candy or cigar store attachment. The New York World's Nellie Blve. he correspondent who is endeavoring to circumnavigate the globe in 72 days or less, will pass through this city about the 20th, on her way home to New York city. She began her tour Nov. 14th. and the story of it will be interesting. The World is financially able to do a great many things, and the story of a young lady, unattended, going around the world in so short a time will be set down as a World achievement exceeding the fiction of Jules Verne's Phileas Fogg.

We notice the following paragraph n the Fremont Herald, and there is no reason why a similar institution would not do well in this vicinity: "The hemp factory has declared a ten per cent dividend as a result of the first vear's business, which is a good showing, when it it is considered that there is a large amount of the product yet on hand. When the twine making attachment is added, which we hope to soon announce we shall expect an even better outcome.

A Legal Complication. EDITOR JOURNAL:-Will you be kind nough to tell us the difference between a crop of corn in the field and the same corn after it husked? We have been having a picnic over that question in this neighborhood during the past month. A farmer mortgaged his growing crop of corn to a banker for certain values received. The corn ripened, was husked, piled on the ground subject to the mortgagee's order. A merchant to whom said farmer was indebted got out an attachment, sent teams and men and spent Friday hauling corn to town: the plea was that the mortgage was upon the corn in the field, not the crop after it was husked. Before they commenced ably good judgment and a very amiable dison the second day's work, the banker, who had been absent looking after another lame duck, returned and Saturday night secured about 20 teams and began to hanl the corn to town; they worked all day Sunday until it was all removed The merchant's attorneys were on the ground and in town all day looking after his interests. The night before Christmas the Sunday carriers were all arrest ed for Sabbath breaking, were tried and acquitted. The banker then arrested the merchant's party for transacting legal business on Sunday. Banker gained. The elevator man was then arrested for paying the corn money to the banker, found guilty of breach of trust. The farmer commenced action under the homestead law because they left him neither feed nor fuel. There have been three justice trials and now, as a closing tableau, there will be three suits growing out of the affair brought before the next term of the county court. Where will vesterday by electing W. O. Pugsley of the corn be when they get through?
