CELESTE LE CLERE'S ESCAPE.

"The coldest day of the season," said strong men, as they buttoned closely about their overcoats.

"I must say, Celeste, I almost envy you, as Mr. Lathrop is evidently your devoted admirer."

"Oh, Celeste, what a fortunate girl you are to have such an elegant home, plenty of money, and a kind good father."

"Oh, Celeste, how could you hide this from me? And it is inscribed, 'Ever your own, and Walter.'"

"I will promise nothing; perhaps jealousy makes you so anxious about me. I remember some one who used to rave over Walter's dark eyes and stately air."

"Celeste, you do not mean that; let us not part in anger, but kiss and make up, as the children say."

"Oh, thank you, Miss Le Clere; you cannot help me. Oh, I want to tell her, if I only dared!"

"Oh, papa, I did not know—"

"You did not know that, daughter? said Mr. Le Clere, eyeing her keenly." Celeste ran to her room and bathed in ice water.

LIGHT MOODS.

"A COUNTER irritant—A saucy aboy girl. THE key to the race problem—the darkey. A FINE thing in art—the point of a pencil."

"I will toss coppers with you," remarked one stealer to another as they made for a couple of policemen."

"JOHNNY, put on your socks," said the fond mother. And Johnny, looking ruefully at the rent his evasive tone had made, responded: "I'll see 'em darned first."

"Do you know there's something about that little fellow over there which is particularly attractive. The rest of the boys are perfect young savages, and I feel as though I'd like to snip the whole lot. But that little chap isn't like the rest."

"MISTRESS—Bridget, I wish you would find my ink-stand for me. Bridget (parlor maid)—Please, mum, every time O'fills that ink-stand O'fills me hands that black they don't get clean for a wake."

"STOLE A MAN'S HOUSE IN CHICAGO. I never in my life saw such a place as Chicago, said L. F. Thomas, of Springfield, Mass."

"HE HAD A FAMILY. In making final proof before the United States land office, Judge Guichard, of Walla Walla, usually asks, 'Have you a family?'"

"THE first one he submitted it to was a public official in Dundee, who, after reading it, said it was the artist, he would make short work of the intruder."

"The laundryman has to receive a good many cuffs in this world. PERHAPS there is nothing so touching about a small child as his hands, after it has been making mud-pies."

"A MINT 'stick'—The employe who has retained his position under the different administrations. A few 'c' 'stick.'"

"STEE—I think cigarette smoking is something vile. What do you smoke mostly in Chicago? He (of the Lake City)—Hams."

"FIRST tramp—Why is it that the way of the transgressor is hard? Second tramp—Cause the cursed old path is so often traveled, I suppose."

"ANOTHER VIRGINIA INCIDENT. A couple of men and a dog. Went out to kill a bear in a bog. It turned them both gay. When visited by a boy. For shooting a farmer's fat hog."
