THE COUNTRY BOY

Happy the boy whose lot in life is to be a country boy...

NORA'S JOURNEY

"Is this my station?" nervously questioned the pretty young girl...

"Yes, the next is yours," replied the official politely...

"It was from her cousin Tom, and she thought it the most interesting mistake she had ever received...

"Nora, dear Nora, you are wanted at the club tonight...

"You had better start next morning, but you will not care for this...

"I will be at the station Tuesday, for I must not have the heart to disappoint your affectionate cousin...

Nora was utterly untraveled, but everything went off very pleasantly...

"She has come," announced Mrs. Jay, who had been favored with a back view of Nora's dapper traveling suit...

"The actress," cried Mrs. Taylor, another stage struck madam, dropping her fork...

"What business has an actress here?" growled a stolid business man half way down the table...

"She is on her way to take part in the theatricals of the Shamrock Club next week," replied Mrs. Taylor...

"She is perfectly lovely," cried Miss Sniff, a roselod of twenty-eight who affected schoolgirlish airs...

"What a shame!" exclaimed Mrs. Jay, "She does not intend that she shall get a night of her face, that is evident..."

"If we could only have some souvenir," murmured Miss Sniff, whose room was filled with "tropics" of distinguished people...

"You might find a stray hair in the hairbrush after she leaves," suggested the surly business man...

"The ladies were very unimpressed and friend with the contempt he deserved, and yet that speech developed an idea that they made use of long after they should have been at rest..."

"Hunted, surely," thought poor Nora, "we need to start for a half hour, for the dim corners of the room and hovering over the dressing table..."

"She hasn't even a powder-ball," whispered one disappointed investigator...

"I've got a button off her jacket," said another...

"Give me one, too," murmured a third...

"They're robbing me," thought Nora, rising upon one elbow and screaming faintly...

The room was deserted very quickly then, with a great hustling and some stifled laughter...

There was no more sleep for Nora that night, and as soon as the morning came she arose and attempted to dress herself with a suppressed titter in her room...

"Hunted, surely," thought poor Nora, "we need to start for a half hour, for the dim corners of the room and hovering over the dressing table..."

plms, my loss and my shoes. Something must be done at once. I wish to take the morning train...

"It's the actress Tom Sterne was telling us about," said one of the gentlemen in an audible aside...

"I am not an actress," replied Nora attempting to hide one of the little bare feet which had peeped from beneath her long skirt...

"What shall I do?" asked Tom Sterne's friend, Harry Sennott, said one of the group...

"There must have been a mistake," said the gentlemanly proprietor...

"No, she is not," said Tom Sterne, who was smiling when she explained matters at once...

"The ladies mistook Miss Sterne for the actress the Shamrock Club are going to have on the program...

"Yes, the next is yours," replied the official politely, and then Nora Sterne sank back in her place and drew Tom's hand back from her shoulder...

"It was from her cousin Tom, and she thought it the most interesting mistake she had ever received..."

A Shopping Incident. She was a busy woman, getting ready to go away for the summer, and time was precious, but she must buy before she went...

"A pair of corsets, please, P. D., size 22," humbly answered the little woman, glad at last that her presence had become known...

"Well, we haven't got any 22 down here. Here, boy, go upstairs and get some P. D. corsets, sizes 21, 22 and 23, several of each..."
