DEATH OF REV. DR. REED.

The Pioneer Missionary Passed Peacefully Away Last Night.

A Good Man Gave to His Reward—His Early Life and Struggles as a Pioneer Missionary.

Rev. Julius A. Reed D. D., the youngest son of Dr. Elijah Reed and Hannah MacLean was born in East Windsor Hill, Conn., Jan. 16, 1809 and died at Davenport, Ia., at 12:15 a. m. Aug. 27, 1890, at the home of his youngest daughter, leaving his wife, who has been an invalid for several years and two daughters, Mrs. Henry W. Wilcox and Mrs. S. E. Smith.

Rhode Island and Mrs. S. E. Smith, his father, a noted physician, who practiced medicine until after 80 years of age, hoped he would enter the same profession, as his father and brother Dr. M. MacLean Reed, who practiced medicine for forty-seven years in Jacksonville, Ill. The younger preferred the ministry. Many clergymen and physicians were among his mother's ancestors, several of whom were professors in the university at Elmboro, Scotland.

Through his father he was a descendant of Gov. Bradford of Plymouth, Mass. His stout adherence to his convictions of truth and principles were life long characteristics.

For two years Dr. Reed was a member of Trinity college, Hartford. Afterward entered Yale college, from which he graduated at the age of 28. The next year he spent as a tutor in the family of Hon. Wm. Jay, Bedford, N. Y. In 1834 he spent in teaching in the Elm Grove school for the poor boys.

Hon. Jas. Hall being the principal. The following two years he spent as private tutor at Natchez, Miss. He then returned north and never abandoned the theological course at Yale, after which he was licensed to preach in Aug. 1835. A pioneer to the west so early as 1837, he spent the winter of 1837-38 in the West, where he was engaged in religious and educational work.

Four years later he returned east, owing to the ill health of Mrs. Reed, and he spent the winter of 1841-42 in the West, where he was engaged in religious and educational work.

He was one of the first Congregational ministers in the state; assisted in organizing the first Congregational church in the West, at Keokuk, Iowa. He next removed to Fairfield and in October 1845, with his family, came to Davenport, where he remained for two years, his appointment by the American Home Missionary society, as its superintendent, making a change of residence.

This position he held from 1845 to 1849, save six years, performing most faithful and acceptable labor. Nothing was too difficult for him to undertake, and he was ever ready to accomplish what was in the line of duty.

He was one of the first to select a site for Iowa college, being one of its founders, and charter trustees, which has been officially connected for nearly twenty years and in which he always felt a deep interest.

A cherished desire of his was to attend the fortieth commencement, an account of which was read to him during his last illness.

In 1881, accompanied by a daughter, he made an extended trip through Europe. He afterward visited every part of interest in this country. A few months since he spent some months in Washington, where he contracted a severe illness from which he never fully recovered.

Always active in recollections he had made an extensive collection of facts and recollections, can ever complete. His last work was the preparation of a paper on the history of Congregationalism in Iowa for the "semi-centennial" held in Des Moines in May last. Severe illness prevented him at that time, which he had anticipated with much eagerness.

His death, while not unexpected, will be keenly felt by his hosts of friends all over the state. (Davenport (Ia.) Tribune, Aug. 28.)

Saturday afternoon last at J. R. Kinnam, six and a half miles northeast of Shelby, this county, Rudolph Gabel, a young man working for Thos. Darning, was shot at by J. R. Kinnam, the ball passing upward across the left chest, inflicting a painful but not dangerous wound. The trouble arose over some hay, as to how it should be stacked, Kinnam assuming to direct it to be stacked one way, and Gabel insisting on his way. Darning had leased the hay land of Kinnam. When Sheriff Hamilton went to arrest Kinnam, he leveled a shotgun on him and said: "Don't you come in." The sheriff went to Shelby, got help, and came back and put him under arrest. He had his hearing and was held to answer next week to a criminal charge. Kinnam is well known here, especially by many of the older settlers. He owns a section of land, a fine farm, on which he has fifty acres of fruit and fruit trees. Young Gabel is reported as a peaceable man, not inclined to quarrel.

Stevenson Bros., separator at Grand Prairie is becoming quite an institution for that section. The proprietor bought a half acre of land of J. H. Hellbusch, on which their plant is located. The separator is about two feet high, two feet in diameter, is run by steam at the rate of five thousand revolutions per minute, and has a capacity of two thousand pounds of milk at a time. The main part of the butter into one place, dirt into another, and the milk in another, and so quickly is it done that a farmer can bring his wagon load of milk, and stand on his return home within ten or fifteen minutes. This particular separator accommodates a radius of ten miles, and those who have been selling their butter, are so well pleased with the treatment they receive from Stevenson Bros. that they are making arrangements to double their supply another year. This method makes the butter worth two or three cents a pound more than any other.

Thursday a farmer had drawn $0 from the bank, and when he went with his family to the show, it was seen that he had quite a roll of money, and he was strongly solicited to purchase tickets for reserved seats, and did so. One of the four or four men who were standing around, asked him to exchange bills for silver, which he claimed he was loaded down with, and in the shuffle the farmer got thirty dollars less than he ought, but didn't find it out till afterwards. He made complaint to chief of police Taylor, who in a short time succeeded in getting the money, even went out of it, placed in the hands of the farmer, a dishonest policeman would have stood with the rascal, and made ten or twenty dollars out of it. It is creditable to the proprietors of the show that they did everything in their power to aid the policeman in securing the money and placing it where it belonged.
