often do we see umbrellas turned inside out simply through lack of care or of knowledge! This is something that never ought to happen; at least it ought never to happen in such gales as we have in the streets of New York City. Few people know how to hold an umbrella under such circumstances. "In order to guard it properly and rotect it from damage it should be firmly grasped by both hands, Let one hand seize it near the handle end of the stick, about in the place where it would be held in the mildest June shower. Then let the other take an equally firm bold far up the stick, close to the point where the spring holds the outstretched ribs.

"Thus you can not only protect your self from the rain as much as possible, but you render a collapse of your umbrells almost out of the question. If a woman is out in a blow and tries to hold her skirts up with one hand and to control her umbrella with the other.

it is not the least wonder in the world that she meets with a mishap. "There is more science in taking care of an umbrella," the dealer said in conclusion, "than one person in a hundred understands. I have no doubt that I could make an umbrella last twice as long as any one of nine-teaths of my customers. I would do it merely by acting upon the hints I have given and others equally as simple which would suggest themselves. "It may not be good for business to

"Then why do you say he died from the effects of alcoholism, when we all know that he was shot?" "That's all very true," the coroner replied. "but the man who shot him was drunk. Don't talk to me, if you please. I understand my business. Deceased was killed by whisky."-Arkansaw Traveler.

The account savs: He ate at one meal a three and four years will give frequently whole sheep, and at another time thirty dozen of pigeons. At the residence of Sir William Sidney he ate as much as would have sufficed for thirty men.

At Lord Watten's, in Kent, he devoured eighty-four rabbits at one sitting, which, at the rate of half a rabbit for each man, would have served 168 men. At breakfast he ate eighteen yards of black pudding and during the day ate a whole hog. When accommo-dated with fruit he ate three pecks of damsons.
