But how to obtain such a currency is the difficult problem to solve. Those who feel disposed are invited to criticize the following suggestions which it is believed, if put in operation, will furnish a currency that will meet the demands above enumerated, as nearly as any sys-

Let us go a step further. To prevent the money kings from cornering the money, let the government also become a bank of deposit, a savings bank, and receive deposita, paying a small rate of interest to the depositor, and issuing its debanture bonds or negotiable certificates of deposit, psyable on, say ten days notice. When a financial crisis is threatened, the banks or others who have these certificates of deposit can oblass the same of deposits and small rate of interest to the depositor, and issuing its debanture bonds or negotiable certificates of deposit can oblass processes of deposit can oblass processes of deposit can oblass processes of deposit can oblass processes.

We would thus have a currency "as good as gold" everywhere. The constitutional guaranty that congress shall pass no law impairing the obligation of contracts will make this money more than mere fist money. The real estate of the nation is bound to convert this money into the currency of the world if necessary, and only the destruction of the national constitution or the end of the world can make worthless the money so issued."
