In this vault was where the fire was found.

Special Policeman, J. C. Techndy, first oticed smoke in the building and aroused Paul Hagel, when the fire was located and extinguished in a few minutes, by several buckets of water. It seems that the fire originated about as follows: Some of Mr. Hagel's children came to the store Sunday evening for eggs. John Stupfel said he would get them; went back to the vault, struck a match, lit a candle, showed the children how the eggs wers candled, and left the candle burning. If the fire had been anywhere else in the building than in the vault, the very strong probability is that nothing about the building could have been saved, and that THE JOURNAL plant would have gone up in smoke and flame. As it was, we are very thankful that the damage was little more

HAMMOND—At his residence in Grand Island, Tuesday morning, Oct. 20th, of kidnetrouble, after a short illness, John Hammond. The deceased was born in West Berkshire, May 21, 1838. In Franklin, Vt., he was married to Miss Mary E. Hicks, Feb. 1, 1854. In August, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Co. B. 7th Minn. volunteer infantry, and was engaged in the Indian service in that state eighteen months as a soldier, but also as citizen. An old comrade tells us of a woman among those left for dead by the raiding Indians, who was rescued by Mr. Hammond, and is one of the many befriended by the Captain who will revere his memory as long as they live. After his service against the Indians, Mr. Hammond was transferred to Battery K, 1st
