Horse-sense or Mule-sense

ED. JOURNAL:- "The Argus" does no seem to have gained an ounce of "horsesense" by its removal to Columbus, because an article entitled "Finance from the standard of horse-sense," copied from the Lincoln Herald in the Argus, is so bare of even "horse-sense" that any thinking man can scarcely see a trace of the poorest "mule-sense" in it.

The writer of this is neither a lawver nor a financier, nor a capitalist, but simply an old laboring man, yet his little common sense is boiling over when he reads such nonsense as that contained in said piece of scribbling, and he is bound to say a few words in explanation to Bixby & Co. The Argus says: "To our view, money is a commodity, an article of ordinary use and not differing a whit from any other commodity in its use."

Is it indeed? Let us see! Provisions are eaten up, clothes are worn out, even houses and furtiture and implements and hardware and china and glassware break and rust and decay, but moneythough at best passing from hand to hand-remains, and if there are two kinds, one kind of artificial or fictitious, and the other of real, intrinsic value, plenty of money then, we had masses of smenbacks" and "shinplasters," and who knows what all. It all was made "legal tender" by law. Everybody had

Couldn't he purchase as much for it as for the bulk of paper? Doesn't that prove plainly that it is not the bulk but the real intrinsic value of it that makes money really useful?

But there is another point comprehensible even for mule-sense. No sooner was the country flooded with fiat money, than gold and silver and even copper disappeared. Where did they go to? They went partly out of the country, partly into the vaults of the banks, and were put into old teapets and stockings and buried in the ground. and hid in the bed-straw, and who knows where all? Enough, the visit of a gold dollar and eke a silver dime was as "rare and far between as angel's Bixby & Co. will say. True, but equally true, if supply and demand regulate the value, then your great bulk of money for which you contend will have the same effect that the issue of flat money had during the war. Money will go down and everything else go up-everything but - to my recollection - the newspapers. Work and material went up for them but the papers kept and had to keep their old price and many of them died of too much money. Therefore let Saunders & Co. beware!

In the free coinage of silver or "silver swindle" as it is rightly termed is bonanza but not for us common every day mortals—a bonanza only for the silver barons, money kings, capitalists and the like human or inhuman beings. Mr. Editor, we will let brother Saunders & Co. keep all such horse-sense and use only such common-sense as our mothers used to go by and we will come ALL RIGHT.

[From our regular correspondent.] The house census committee has given considerable attention to the proposi tion of establishing a permanent census bureau, and has heard arguments on the subject from a number of gentlemen, including Superintendent Porter, and it has invited General Francis A. Walker, who was superintendent of the tentl census, to give the committee his ideas on the subject at as early a day as may suit his convenience.

The Paddock pure food bill, which was ecently passed by the senate, will be favorably reported to the house by the com mittee on agriculture.

A national organization to be known his farm four miles south of Leigh, Fri- as the Henry Clay Club, has been organized here. Its motto is "The protection of American markets and the elevation of Americans," and its purpose is to unite those persons who are believers in the fundamental principles so ably advocated by Henry Clay, and to encourage the promulgation and adoption of those truths which were the inspiration of his life work. Laterature is to be distributed and branch clubs organized in the mining and manufacturing sections of the south, and arrangements have already been perfected for sending the following eloquent gentlemen to that section to make speeches: Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, ex-Senator Evarts, and Representatives Reed and Burrows.

The fate of the free coinage bill, which everybody expected to have been decided, as far as the house is concerned last week, is still a matter of doubt. The house committee on rules is now deliberating on a proposition from Repesentative Bland, the author of the bill to report a special rule, again bringing the bill before the house and prohibiting fillibustering thereon, in other words the very cloture rule, which democratic speakers and editors declared to be unconstitutional and everything that was bad when it was proposed that the republicans of the senate should adopt it | Heintz, druggists. to pass the election bill, at the last session of congress. But the defeat of the silver men last week appears to have taken the confidence out of them to a large extent, and many of them openly express their fears that the bill will be defeated. The anti-silver men, however, also express fears that the bill will pass, if it ever gets to a straight vote before the house, which makes it evident that the issue of this week's fight is extremely doubtful and that it will be very close

The story that the president had said that he would not allow his name to be presented to the Minneapolis convention has again been started. There is no truth in it. He has never said that he would be or that he would not be a
