SECRETARY ELKINS is justly regarded as one of the shrewdest political observers in the country, and his opinions are always given careful consideration, even by his political opponents. He says of the situation: "The republican party is entitled to and will succeed on the platform of the democratic convention and the action of the convention leading up to it. The platform itself adopted is the nearest approach to free trade this country has ever seen except the out and out declaration for free trade in the Confederate constitution. The business public will take no chances; it will prefer to be satisfied with a sure thing which is a good enough thing. I am confident there are surprises in store for the democracy. With an honest count we would carry several of the southern states. In 1888 Cleveland only had a majority of one thousand five hundred in Virginia, and less than four hundred in West Virginia. It will require a good deal of bloody shirt howl about the election bill and kindred stuff, and, perhaps, some cheating to beat Harrison in those states, and even with those means I doubt if it can be done."

THIRD PARTY MEETS.

OMAHA, Neb., July 4.—The National Convention of the People's Independent Party met here to-day at 10 o'clock, but the delegates were late in getting into the hall. The Coliseum building, in which the convention is being held, seats about twelve thousand persons and in appearance resembles the Minneapolis hall. The attendance of visitors at the first session was not large, and, as in Chicago, there were many unoccupied seats when the first session opened. As the hall began to fill a notable feature was the presence of many women delegates. Chairman Taubeneck, of the national executive committee, came upon the platform shortly after 10:30 and entered into consultation with the other leaders. By 11 o'clock the part of the hall allotted to delegates was fairly well filled, most of 1,775 delegates being present, but in much confusion. The general remark was that it was a fine-looking body of men. Strong and striking physiognomies were numerous.

Chairman Taubeneck called the convention to order and attempted to do so at 11:30 o'clock. It required ten minutes to produce order and Sergeant-at-Arms L. A. Belter's loud voice was necessary to make Taubeneck's gavel effective. As the delegates finally quieted down it was evident that the times of the convention had been made less than ideal. Delegates or alternate present will be allowed to cast the full vote of their respective counties.

Ben S. Terrill of Texas was introduced to reply on behalf of the convention to the address of Mayor Bemis. He did so in a vigorous and complimentary speech, which was received with applause at frequent intervals. Quoting a statement of Mayor Bemis that dear God meant cheap chairs, he gesticulated wildly and the audience began to cheer. He declared that the new party had wiped out the old one and that the blue and the gray as no other party could, was met with applause which shook the building. As an ex-Confederate soldier he declared that the new party made him feel as much at home in Nebraska as in Texas.

Chairman Taubeneck then introduced as temporary chairman C. H. Ellington of Georgia and surrendered the gavel to him. J. W. Hayes of New Jersey was made temporary secretary, with C. P. Carpenter of Minnesota and Jesse Poundstone of California assistants. Mr. Ellington proceeded in a somewhat labored manner to deliver a ponderous address which was only finished by a final resort to manuscript, to which the speaker closed and awkwardly confined himself. The convention began to show evidences of weariness and impatience as the long-drawn-out and platitudinous speech went on. Even the enthusiasm of the convention was hardly equal to stirring applause for Ellington's fiery language.

A motion was then made by a delegate from New Hampshire to take a recess until 1:30. This was amended to 2 o'clock, but before the motion was put it was announced by Vandervoort of Nebraska, that the "blue and gray" which was received with prolonged cheers. A distribution of a large quantity of mail was made to delegates from the stage and when the motion for a recess till 2 this afternoon was put and lost.
