THE American Economist calls attention to the fact that during the last two years of Grover Cleveland's administration, the balance of trade was against the United States, for the first time since | Engine company 27, whose house is 1875. It is further deserving of note half a block away, could get there, the that the balance has been well on the right side since Harrison has occupied and frightened women were clamborthe White House, and it amounted to a modest little $202,944,342 in 1892.

One of the latest, and as yet the most original defense of free trade as the result of alleged thought over the Homestead troubles, is that of a man who says that "any protection which enables the common workmen to make from $6 to $8 a day is too much protection. It cost me $2500 to obtain my college education, and there is not one-half my graduating class that could earn half of $8 a day." Boiled down -- "as it is difficult for any college-bred man to earn over $4 a day, any system that enables an uneducated laborer to earn double that, as is done at Homestead, is vicious," A lame argument, truly, against protection, but a very good one to illustrate the tendency of these times to the practical, as against the theoretical, the non-productive industries. The protective policy helps to develop natural resources; directs study to man's natural wants and their proper supply from the nearest source.

While the Metropolitan opera-house was burning four alarms were sent out for a fire at Spring and Wooster streets, in the dry goods district. This fire, it is now telephoned, is beyond control. The loss can only be guessed at this writing. It will not exceed $500,000 and probably a great deal less tuan that. It depends on the extent of damage done in the wings to the right and left of the stage, which are as yet obstructed. Whatever the loss it is covered by sufficient insurance to protect the company. Directly under the stage the scenery was stored. Of that, as of the stage itself, there is not a shred left that could be burned. 10:15-Fifteen firemen are reported killed by the falling of a wall at the fire at 122 Wooster street. Over one hundred persons were in the building when the fire broke out and many were injured in escaping.

Many are missing, but the number of dead cannot be learned until the firms THE tariff tax on cigarettes is twenty- occupying the burned buildings call little doubt, however, that a number of young women were cut off from the stairways by the rapid advance of the flames and perished. So fast did the fire spread and so inadequate were the means of escape that it is a wonder that half of the persons caught in the building did not perish. The building where the fire started was an old one, the walls of brick were thin and came down with a crash as soon as the fire gained good headway inside. One of the firemen was caught under the first wall that fell and was severely injured, and several others went down under a mass of brick and

At 12:20 the fire was under control, but at that time it was impossible to get beyond the street lines, owing to the intense heat. All that remained on the site of the fire was about twenty-five feet of wall, fronting on Wooster street, the offices back of which had been occupied by Butler & Co. The saloon and the building at the corner of Prince and Wooster streets were still standing and the buildings along Prince street had been gutted.
