The majority of citizens have not the least idea of the work done in these institutions and could not possibly appreciate it without examining for themselves. We can give some idea, however by a description of the display arranged by the landscape gardner, John Tanna hill, for the inspection of the hundreds of people who visited the schools last Wednesday and Thursday. The independents claim that by free coinage the circulation would be increased, which is not the fact. Those who have read the General's years ago there have been three very touching the questions at issue in this campaign. Hon. A. E. Cady opened his argument by saying that he was glad to meet the people of Platte county, and explained why Judge Cronnse, could not be present. Gen. Van Wyck had said that he stood on the same platform now that he stood on forty years ago. That was undoubtedly true if he meant by it that he was standing on a platform and running for an office. Mr. VanWyck has described Nebraska as being in a deplorable condition every way. Such was far from being the fact. In common with many of the audience, doubtless, the speaker had come to Nebraska with but a dollar in the world, and under a chattel mortgage. With a young wife to help, they have managed to work and save and prosper, and when any man, whether Gen. Van Wyck or a less humble citizen, undertook to tell him and his wife and such as they, that they were paupers sity comes, we have our share in that also. Nebraska is prosperous, and Nebraska farmers are reaping their share, which is quickly and conclusively proved by the fact that twenty years ago land here was worth $2.50 an acre, when now it is selling for $25 to $35, and in the meantime all have been making a living.

He then gave a full explanation of the sub-treasury scheme from the bill introduced in congress. It provides that the government shall erect ware houses in which to store certain nonperishable products but did'nt provide for others, and if it should become a law it would be worse than any trust or corporation now existing. This plan growers have grown cotton so long that they cannot raise anything else, and who want some place to store their surplus product until they can realize a big price for it. To make the scheme a fair one all around, every man who has non-perishable goods, say baled hay, lumber. hardware, &c., &c., should have the privilege of an advance of 80 per cent on his goods, and have them stored until he can corner the market, and advance the price, thus making the public help private enterprise. If this scheme should become a law it would produce a commercial pandemonium such as never before existed in this country, and worse

He next gave his attention to the silver question setting forth and com-ness view of it. Mr. Cady closed his able having spoken extempore, with thanks to the audience for their kind attention. He was followed by VanWyck, who used his fifteen minutes in denouncing the old parties and commending the principles of the independents.
