"August Flower"

"I am happy to state to you and to suffering humanity, that my wife has used your wonderful remedy, August Flower, for sick headache and palpitotion of the heart, with satisfactory results. For several years she has been a great sufferer, has been under the treatment of eminent physicians in this city and Boston, and found little relief. She was induced to try August Flower, which gave immedaite relief. We cannot say to much for it." L. C. Frest. Springfield, Mass.

iew Model For Velvet Street Coats Among the styles for cool weather wraps is the model which shows a short front with wide revers, much like the very popular Eton jacket of the sumline there are long directoire coat-tails that fail to the skirt hem. A black velvet wrap made in this fashion is a good investment, for it has an elegant effect with comparatively little outlay, as the short open fronts can be made well with every sort and color of skirt. Ribbed vests are also used for these coats--plain or in the popular shadow effects produced by the underweaving of a contrasting color.

From mere force of habit I had Mr. Pierrepont?" grown into looking out for the doctor and finally to taking a sort of interest in the number of times he came. The day before, while I was still at my post at the window, he had been four times from which I argued that the patient was worse.

I had not been reading very long when there was a ring at the street door bell. A minute or so later my landlady came into the room and said that the gentleman who lodged next door was below, and had asked for her husband, who happened to be out for the evening. On hearing this the gentleman had inquired if there was any one else in the house who could ac empany him back next door for a few minutes on a matter of business. The landiady was unable to go herself, the servant being out, but as the gentleman seemed disappointed she had taken the liberty of suggesting that he should ask me. Would I. at any rate, see him and then decide?

I was only too glad to be of use to people who appeared to be in great trouble far from their friends in a seaside lodging house, and I told the landlady to show the gentleman in. In another moment the tall looseframed man whom I had seen so often attending the doctor to his carriage stood bowing in the doorway. · Pray come in," I said rising. .In what way can I be of service to you?" ·It is simply the small matter of witnessing the signature to a will,' he said. "If I might trespass on your kindness to step in next door for that ourpose I should be greatly obliged. We parted at the door of No. 13, and I went back to my pipe and newspaper, having been absent barely twenty minutes, viz., from 8:30 to 8:50. That night as I retired to rest I found myself speculating as to the amount of Mr. Gaston Pierrepont's interest in the will I had witnessed. But in the morning I received a shock. The first piece of news my landlady-bursting in with the breakfast tray-imparted was that Gen. Maitland was dead.

For a moment I experienced a sensation of surprise. Probably the general's ruddy cheeks had forbidden the idea of such a speedy removal, but I soon saw that, after all there was not much to wonder at.

The day was again fine, and I determined to return to the ruined tower to finish the sketch I had begun. The chief difficulty of the extensive farmer is that it is impossible to give management. It is on these numerous small matters, rather than on a few great matters, that success or failure depends. This is especially true in the close competition to which farming is now subjected. The fact that nature works with the farmer does not count as it once did. There was a time when what nature did green food to eat. made every farmer's work a success. Now nature does quite as much as it ever did, but it requires that the farmer intelligently co-operate with nature to an extent never before known. It is not enough that the large farmer reduce his acreage. What is rather needed is that he put more skill and thought into the management of what land he tills.

Do Bees Make Heavy. The question is asked over and over again, .Do bees make honey, or do they only gather it?"
