Deacon Jones and Elder White had lived on adjoining farms for over thirty years, and never a word of dispute had passed between them, avers the Detroit Free Press. Their wagons, plows, drags, hoes, rakes and other utensils were used in common. They had lots side by side in the graveyard, and more than once they had loaned and borrowed chairs for a funeral. Two brothers would not have agreed as well as these two men did in politics, religion and all else. One afternoon as the elder was mowing his dooryard the deacon came over to trade newspapers with him. and they sat down under a cherry tree to talk. Pretty soon along came a stranger who announced that he was a ly inappropriate. The strictures are surveyor, and he asked if they didn't given carelessly and freely, and ofwant the line run.

There is one sentence in the President's inaugural address that has carried consternation into the ranks of the office seekers, who are more numerous in Washington than ever before. The language is emphatic, and they have taken it as intended to be personal to them; as it doubtless was. Following is the sentence referred to, which is as interesting to democratic office seekers in your section as to those here to present their claim in person: "One mode of the misappropriation of public funds is avoided
