The Reporter believes that so long as a personal bond is required, the state and counties will continue to be troubled as they have been, and also continue to lose thousands upon thousands of dollars. The remedy suggested is, less accumulation of money: let the large amount in the school fund be placed on good security, at a fair rate of interest; laws could be passed relative to bond issues, sinking funds, etc., by which the credit of a county could be kept fully up to standard, its obligations promptly met, and still avoid the large accumulation of money in its treasury, thereby removing a potent evil force in county affairs.
