The above, which we clip from the Central City Republican, is somewhat applicable to Platte county, as well as to Merrick. We really wish we could say that the last sentence would be true here, but it is almost too much, even to hope for except on the theory that all other elements get together against the day for a two months' visit at Madison "bosses," and combine forces for success. Under such circumstances there could scarcely be a question as to the result, and this is desirable to more classes than a few. There are quite a number of prominent, worthy democrats who are more or less outspoken against the conmoyer gave a party Saturday evening tinued rule of a certain few of the party, stamins or independence enough to get question. They never have had, up to now, and there is nothing in sight that would lead an observer to think that the coming democratic county convention will be much otherwise than such conventions have heretofore been.

Glorious rains, small grain filling the satisfaction of the farmer. Corn taking them out of the orchard and garden and cause them to be cut along the head lands and roadways. We occasionally hear of the Russian thistle growing in this, (Columbus) township, but have never seen any ourselves. We have ground our little hatchet and are prepared to make war on them at first

While gathering cherries one day this week Plessie Drinnin took a fall from a tree and came near breaking an arm: luckily the limb is able to be out of the sling now. There ought to be tone of that whole some fruit, tomatoes, put up this year, and we believe there are plants enough now growing in this vicinity to make that the principal fruit for canning this season. Mrs. Emma Sewell of Independence

Kansas, with her two children, is spending the heated term on a visit with her mother, Mrs. H. L. Drinnin. This vicinity is well represented at the Columbus Normal school. Last spring and summer we saw Mr.

Tschudy, who lives on Wm. Bucher's new farm, toiling faithfully from early morn till late at night. The hot winds came, and we saw his crops wither and die and he, like ourselves and others. did not raise litter enough to bed his stock. This spring we saw him commence to plow and plant with no more encouragement than a year ago; now we see his fields teeming with heavy small JACOB GREISEN. grain, just turning to golden hue, abundance of grass for hay, and a big corn crop almost assured.
