Doon Stanley and the Soller. It is related that Dean Stanley case went to an ins in a country village and, after ordering a pot of ale, ant down on a bench baside an old sailor. The dean soon got into a conversation with the man, and presently asked him if he could say the points of the com-pas. The sailor could do so. "Now," said the dean. "You you are then said the dean, "can you say them backward?" This also the sailor was able to do. After a pause, the latter asked the dean whether he could say the Lord's prayer. Dean Stanley repeated the prayer as desired. "Now, then," said the sailor, "can you repeat it backward?" The dean made the attempt, closing his eyes the better to concentrate his thoughts on his task. At length he finished. "Yes," said the sailor. "that's all very well, but haven't you heard that we must watch as well s pray?" The rogue had drank the cleric's beer while the latter was en-gaged in saying the Lord's prayer backward -- Westminister Gazette.

Where Was He?

The Forfarshire lairds of a remote ay were wont to go weekly to great a steep grassy slope down to the Firth. One of the old gentlemen (they were gentlemen) rolled off his horse and rolled away down the declivity. The water at the edge was only a few inches deep at that season of the tide, and there he lay. By and by, some-one remarked that the laird's saddle was empty, though his horse was trotting on with the others. So the party of the tonsils complicated and difficult. turned back, leoking for the missing It is a common practice to cut off the man, and exclaiming: "Faar are ye, Blanwiggin? Faar are ye?" A Sad Predicament.

One day a Dutchman in his shirt alcover was shaving himself before the glass. His hand trembled so that he cut off the tip of his nose. The pain caused him to drop his razor, which fell on his boot and cut off a portion of his big toe. He promptly picked up the two fragments, applied them still warm, to the open sores, and bound up the lot. A fortnight later, on removing the bandages, he discovered, to his horror, that he had made a mistake. He had put the toe in place of nose and vice versa. Now, when he wants to blow his nose, he is obliged to take off his boot -Schwabische Tagwacht.
