republican chief of Nebraska, so far as the disposition of the Federal offices is concerned, under the incoming administration, and we are glad to note that in a recent interview he said there would be no attempt to interfere with postmesters and other federal officials having a fixed tenure of office, until their terms had expired. This is right and proper. Business of the government, non-political in its nature, should go right along, and appointees who are fully and fairly discharging their duties should be allowed to serve out their terms. Senator Thurston's view is not only wise but the publication of it is timely.
