—W. S. Jay, the versatile and able representative of the Lincoln Journal was in the city Saturday, and honored THE JOURNAL sanctum with a visit.

—The Leora Lane Dramatic Company give entertainments here Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings this week. They always greet large houses here.

—The Eastern Star will hold sessions Thursday and Friday of this week and expect to have a very interesting time. Delegates will attend from this district.

—Miss Abbie Keating has been appointed assistant at the Beatrice institute for the feeble minded. She is certainly a capable and worthy young lady.

—Dr. Martyn, of Columbus, was in town Tuesday afternoon, having drove in from St. Edward after visiting some patients in the country.—[Albion News.

—Prof. Gondring of Chicago, brother of Senator Gondring, was in the city last week. He is at the head of one of the best commercial schools in the country.

—Quite a snow was on the ground Sunday morning, but on Monday there was considerable more of it, making in all about six inches depth and quite solid.

—Supervisors Dietrich Becher and A. G. Rolf attended the supervisors' convention at Lincoln last week. Quite a number of suggestions were made to the legislature.

—Burt McFarland has had quite a tussel with the grip for the past two or three weeks—sometimes better, sometimes worse. He is now reported very much better.

—When you have furniture to repair; picture frames made; or any kind of work in wood to do, call at Rudolph Gisin's, Eleventh street, one door west of Louis Held's. 4

—It is stated that Edison has discovered a chemical combination in the form of a crystal which it is expected will work marvels for those who have defective vision.

—Rev. Shuman was called upon Sunday to conduct the funeral services of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Shaffer of Oconee. The burial took place at Columbus.—[Monroe Republican.

—Louis Schroeder was the lowest bidder for the house at the county poor farm, $885—the highest being $1192.48. There were ten bids in all, and most of the carpenters think the largest bid not too much.

—For laughing purposes only the new Muldoon's Picnic, one night only, Wednesday February 24. We advise all lovers of good shows to turn out and secure seats early in advance. Seats on sale at usual place.

—We were in error in our last issue in saying the St. Catharine reading circle met with the Misses McMahon. The club met with Mrs. V. A. Macken and, besides, reported an exceptionally pleasant afternoon spent.

—Next Saturday, Feb. 27, is the day appointed for the joint session of Madison and Platte county Teachers' associations at Humphrey. All the teachers, school officers and citizens who can decently get there should attend.

—The services being held at the M. E. church will close Wednesday evening. Evangelist McGreggor accompanied by Mr. Williams, a musician, will hold union services for the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches.

—Otto Baker, W. R. Notestein, Louis Held, Dr. Evans, John Wiggins and D. C. Kavanaugh, witnesses in the Higgins case at Omaha, returned Saturday. Later, we learn that the verdict in favor of Mrs. Higgins was $2,000 with interest.

—Just about all Platte county could be reached by telephone on the plan which two Kansas farmers have lately put into operation. They purchased the finest telephone they could get, and for wires use the ordinary barb-fence wires, with excellent results, although they live a mile apart, it is said.

Seed Oats for Sale.

I have about 800 bushels of white oats, crop of 1895. Samples can be seen at Gray's hardware store.

17feb7 ALONZO HADLEY.

—L. Gerrard has been at business again the past week, having had quite a siege with the grip, and still worse with a relapse, having got out a little too soon. He says that this sickness was the first he ever had that touched his lungs.

—F. P. Johnson of the vicinity of Duncan was in the city Saturday. He tells us that his son-in-law, A. T. Hunecote, while driving steers to Silver Creek met with an accident, his pony not seeing a ditch ahead, and, stumbling, fell and his left leg was broken.

—Miss Keeler of Lost Creek township was in the city Saturday canvassing for funds for the building of a church just north of J. H. Sacrider's farm. Church services have been held for many years in the school building, where Miss Muzetta Wheeler is now teaching.

—Mr. Jeffers' talks to the Juniors of the Baptist church Sunday afternoons are attracting considerable attention from those who hear and those who have heard of them. Sunday week, March 7, he is to talk again, giving some of his experience as to the value of a mother's influence towards the better life.

—It appears as though the publication of letters may be doing injustice to the Cowboy preacher lately here, and his wife. The letter purports to be from her father, and in some important particulars regarding the young woman there is certainly misrepresentation, and presumably the whole document has a bad motive.

—Tuesday afternoon of last week, Captain and Mrs. Haight were out driving. The Captain was leading one of his colts, when his driving horse suddenly frightened at something, made a sharp turn, upsetting the buggy and pitching its occupants onto the soft ground. The horse smashed the buggy to pieces, but no further damage was done.

—The Cedar Rapids Outlook of Friday says that the extent of the sickness which has prevailed there the last few weeks is without a parallel in the history of the community, and that the indications now are that the grip is subsiding. There have been a number of deaths. A veterinarian says that horses and cattle there are suffering with the grip very much like the people.

—Through an oversight last week, we failed to mention that W. H. Lewis had received word of the drowning, on February 9, at Jennings, Kansas, while skating, of Ben and Bert Munson, nephews of Mrs. E. O. Rector and Mrs. W. H. Lewis of this city. The older brother was a married man 26 years old, and Bert, his brother, was 16. We have no further particulars.

—Marriage licenses were issued the past week to the following parties by Judge Kilian: Charles Promowski, Miss Anna Kula; Andrew Molsek, Miss Mary Hapdy; Jacob Ferenta, Maggie Lezuach; Augustin Wiedholm, Miss Helena Lohause; E. D. Hyde, Miss Laura Gates; Wojeth Buggj, Mrs. Staniela Kus; Frank Ruth, Miss Anna Sheabel; Johannes Behrens, Miss Amelia Korte.

—At the opera house Wednesday Feb. 24, will be presented for the first time in your city, the new Muldoon's Picnic, the most laughable of all Irish farce comedies. This year everything is new and up to date. Sparkling with Irish wit, high class specialties, funny situations and clean comedy. A show that pleases every one. Admission 25 and 35 cents. Seats on sale at usual place.

—Our laces, embroideries, wash goods, white goods, novelty dress goods, etc., for the spring of 1897 are all in. Come and see the very latest at the White Front Dry Goods Store. E. D. Fitzpatrick. tf

—E. H. Jenkins was elected mustering officer at the encampment at Omaha last week. At the banquet he was placed on the list to speak to a toast that had been assigned to Gen. Cowin and afterwards to Col. Elliott. The theme was The Boys of '61. Jenkins wound up by "What do we think of the boys of '61? One of them goes into the presidential chair March 4—that's a part of what we think of the boys of '61."

—A man by the name of Moran of Platte county has introduced a bill in the legislature to discourage the manufacture and to diminish the consumption of adulterated beer. The bill provides that all liquors in bottles or kegs shall be labeled and if adulterated, the fact shall be plainly stated on the label with a list of the adulterations used. Blessed be Moran. Give us pure beer and brick cheese, or give us a stuffed club to kill the brewer with.—[Oakland Republican.

—J. B. Madden, for three years city editor of the Norfolk News, was in the city Thursday on his way to Honolulu, Sandwich islands. This city, located on an island called Oahu, is becoming quite a trading point. There are consuls there from the United States, France, Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Sweden, Austria, etc. The port is visited annually by hundreds of vessels, many of them whalers. The mean annual temperature is 75°.55, the highest in August 83°.2, the lowest 67°.2 in January.

—An old land mark was removed by the burning of the building used by Henry Herbes as a bar room. The building was moved into Humphrey in '81 from St. Bernard by Wm. Duesman. It was the town's first school room, and the scene of many a lively debate by the talent of the locality during the early '80s. Mr. Duesman kept the property all this time up till about two months ago, when he sold it to Mr. Herbes. The drug store building was also an old land mark and was among the first buildings erected after the railroad was built through here. It stood originally facing the depot about where the east end of the Roth & Sehi's livery barn now stands. When the town was laid out and the present streets platted the building was moved to the site where it was burned. It was built by Dr. Trout, who will be remembered by the old settlers. Jos. Gehr's building was also an old timer. It was used for a post-office in the early days.—[Humphrey Democrat.

Personal Mention.

Theo. Friedhof went to Omaha Sunday.

Fred. Jewell was a Columbus visitor Thursday.

D. H. Jennings was down from St. Edward from Sunday till Wednesday.

Miss Maud Parker went to Kearney Wednesday, called by the sickness of her mother.

Miss Jennie McCann, who has been visiting in Omaha for some time, returned Saturday.

Mrs. Dr. Martyn, of Columbus, and Mrs. Dr. Humphreys, of Monroe, were in Genoa Tuesday, the guests of Mrs. O. E. Green.—[Leader.

District 44 and Vicinity.

Ed. Wescott and wife of Silver Creek were visiting at A. W. Clark's last week.

Master Herman Stonesifer got the lion's share of valentines, about the middle of the month.

Wm. Moore is putting a new wheel on his wind-mill tower, to take the place of the one recently blown off by high wind.

Mr. Hoppy moves from the Bonesteel farm to a farm near Richland, while Henry Schutt moves onto the farm vacated by Mr. Hoppy.

A. Peters, who has worked the E. O. Wells farm the past few years, has, we are informed, taken up a claim in the southwest part of Colfax county.

We are told that we have a wedding on the tapis in this vicinity, but with all our cunning we are as yet unable to give the names of the high contracting parties.

Samuel Miller, who has worked the valley view farm for Mr. Heints the past two years, is moving onto a farm near Oconee, which he will work faithfully this summer.

James Frazier bought a bunch of fat steers, about 40 in number, of Mr. Ahrens on Shell Creek, last Friday. They were western steers, and well fatted.

We learn that John and Edward McCann have rented their farm just across the county line, for a good rental, and together with their mother and sisters will move to Omaha for a season.

The past two weeks have been very unfavorable for winter wheat, freezing the ground at night and thawing out again each day. It is to be hoped we may have snow or rain before many windy days, for the benefit of the plants. Later.—The snow came Sunday and the wheat is safe. "Eureka!"

The J. H. Reed house on Long Look Farm just northeast of the city was being torn down last week by order of the owner, Carl Rhode, and we are told that it will be converted into a receptacle for ear corn. Thus the old land marks are disappearing, one by one, and even those old stately cottonwood trees, just north of the B. & M. depot, were being cut down and removed to make room for speculators' huge corn cribs. It almost grieves us to see those old land marks destroyed, but when we know this to be a progressive age, we do not find fault.

Emil Lousche, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lusche died last Saturday morning at 2 o'clock. He had been regularly at school and was in his place on Friday as usual. In the afternoon of that day he was taken quite ill, but after reaching the fresh air he became better and remained until the close of school. After arriving home he became violently ill and a physician was called, but all that could be done was unavailing, for he died early the next morning. We cannot learn at this writing the direct cause of the sudden demise. The remains were taken from the house Monday morning at 11, and conveyed to the German Lutheran church on Shell Creek, where the body was placed in the graveyard near by.

—Bring your orders for job-work to this office. Satisfaction guaranteed, and work promptly done, as agreed upon.

—We get regularly at THE JOURNAL office "Our Home News," a little paper published at Lincoln by the managers of the Home for the Friendless. It gives an idea of the work that is done at The Home, which certainly is one of the best institutions of the state. Those who are disposed to give anything in the way of money, food or clothing will find here their opportunity, and if you know of children or aged ladies especially, who are homeless or worse, The Home would be a good place for them. The institution is surely doing grand, good work, and the people of this great state should know more concerning its capabilities for good. It is solid, practical christianity.

—The masquerade ball of the Pioneer Hook & Ladder Co. on Monday night was one of the best in their long list of successes. There were about seventy maskers, and the fun kept up until three o'clock in the morning, when the dancing ceased. The Twenty-third annual ball was also a success financially, probably some $25 clear of all expenses. Everybody present was delighted. The Columbus orchestra of six pieces furnished the music, which is always indispensable, of course. Success in these matters is due, not only to the enthusiasm of the membership, but to the alacrity of sub-committees in responding to the call of the committee of arrangements, which in this case was George J. Hagel, George W. Baumgart and Bert J. Galley. The street parade in the afternoon, while not extensive, was certainly unique and attractive.

—We notice by the Washington dispatches that a pension has been granted to Henry Browning. Henry was for many years a resident of this county and was considered one of our pioneers. He saw several years of hard service during the war and came out broken in health. About ten days ago he died at David City. It seems too bad that he should have been kept waiting all these years for what was rightfully due him. The amount that has been allowed him as back pay will be a great aid to his family who were left in very poor circumstances. So says the Schuyler Herald, and such cases there are in every county nearly,—deserving old soldiers "kept waiting all these years" to see justice done them and their families. Here and there among the old boys you will come across one, who with grim determination affirms that he will never apply for a pension so long as he is able to gather together bread and water enough to sustain life. This great American nation should find a more speedy way of determining whether one of its faithful soldiers is entitled to a pension, and, when he is entitled to it, telling him of it, without his having to be kept "waiting for years." If the legislators of the country are not alive to "favors past, which are too easily forgotten," let them have consideration for those which are to come. The best good of the country at large demands that its noble defenders receive some sort of justice, though it be tardy.

On Board the Umbria from Liverpool to New York.

And after landing at Havre, being in the same coach again with some of these people, how pleasantly the hours passed away! Rain was falling when we stepped into the compartment, and as the damp air made us feel somewhat chilly, we try to raise the window to close it, bring it up a little ways and then it sticks; a sharp jerk brings it up suddenly, and bang, the pane flies to pieces. A railway guard steps up to the door and says politely, c'est trois francs, monsieur; the ladies protest, but not wishing to get into a dispute in the presence of all these people, the sixty cents are handed out to him. The rain continues, an occasional gust of wind drives in a few drops through the broken pane; the ladies appeal to the first railroad man in sight, explain the situation to him, tell him that the broken pane has been paid for, and insist that it must be replaced at once; he agrees to do so at once, if possible, but finds not time to have it done; appealed to again by all the ladies, to pacify them he agrees to put us into a first-class compartment, if he cannot have the pane replaced, and leaves us. Proud of their success so far, every railroad man in sight is now appealed to, even threats are made by our fair companions; and is it any wonder that one of the men left alone, in despair, not knowing what to say in reply to all these feminine assaults, calls a few porters to carry our satchels, and politely asks us to step into a compartment de premiere. And now imagine the exultation, the delight of our companions at having won the victory; showers of compliments and felicitations deluge the party that has been the cause of all this excitement. Mademoiselle J. B. leans over, and with that abandon peculiar to the French woman and impossible to the English or American, whispers in scarcely audible tones: "Monsieur, je ne vous—plus." But everything must come to an end; before we were aware of it, we arrived in Paris. With mutually expressed regrets at leaving each other and as the dear ladies bid us several times au revoir, we felt sorry indeed to part with our friends so soon.

But I am digressing and must return to our Cunard steamer; more beautiful weather than we had the first few days, I have never seen on the ocean, but Thursday afternoon the wind raised and in a short time the seas ran quite high; the steerage passengers sitting on benches along the engine rooms try to avoid the water that comes rushing down from the forecastle, but are soon forced to go below to keep from being drenched. Towards night the storm increased in force, ropes were tied across some of the walks that were open to the cabin passengers; the seas ran higher and higher, and the ocean that on leaving Queenstown was as smooth as the waters of a lake, is now nothing but a moving mass of angry waves, that, raising unevenly form a succession of hills and dales apparently deep enough to engulf the largest vessel that ever was afloat. All night the storm continues and reaches its climax Friday afternoon. Sailors were put on guard when the storm commenced and are changed every few hours; one sturdy Englishman is given a post near the ladies' saloon and wears a smile on his face as he looks at the turbulent waters while the water runs down his oil coat. The immense vessel rolls from side to side and bobs up and down like a nutshell in a fast flowing creek. Tons of water are thrown by the wind on the forecastle of the ship, and sometimes the lower deck is covered with it to the depth of 6 or 8 inches; the crests of the waves are changed into spray that fills the air; the stern of the vessel sinks almost to a level with the surface of the sea, then suddenly rises 20 or 30 feet, the propeller is lifted out of the water and suddenly descends again; the terrible force of the 3,000 horse power engines which drive the machinery, when all power of resistance is suddenly removed and as quickly replaced, makes the vessel tremble and groan in its entire length. All day Friday, the same movement up and down, the prow sometimes lower than the waves that confront it, as if defying any further advance, and the sudden jars following each other in rapid succession, make riding on the sea anything but agreeable and are a terrible strain on one's nervous system. A good many passengers are seasick, some are worn out and have retired to their cabins. The only place on deck where you can stay without being drenched is behind the ladies' saloon and there we stand to get a little fresh air, holding on to whatever we can grasp to keep from slipping and losing our balance, as the vessel rolls and pitches with increasing force, and yet what a grand spectacle to see the furious waves chase each other like demons bent on each other's destruction and in the midst of it all, our gallant old vessel forging ahead only at half speed, it is true, but steadily advancing in spite of the terrible seas that assail it from all sides. During the night the wind subsides, the sea becomes somewhat calmer and we enjoy a good night's rest. Saturday morning the sea is somewhat rough yet, and we see a small sailing vessel approach us; her men lower a small skiff and four sailors take charge of it. Our engines are stopped and the party starts in our direction. How the little thing rides the waves is a wonder to behold. When on the crest of one it looks as if it must plunge its prow into the water; but no, it safely gets alongside of us. One of the men boards our vessel and applies for provisions, which are cheerfully given by our commander. It seems the poor sailors have been drifting on the ocean for several days without anything to eat. With smiling faces and grateful hearts they return to their boat and are soon lost out of sight.

In a remarkably short time the ocean becomes quiet and we move on at a rapid rate. Sunday morning we reach Sandy Hook, the sky is clear, the air is sharp and cold, but the rising sun soon warms the atmosphere and everybody feels the stimulus of the pure air and beautiful sunshine.

The ground is covered with snow and the beautiful villas and residences that line the shores as you come into the harbor make a good impression on all the passengers and especially those to whom this is a first glimpse of the new world. Happy and contented is every one to be greeted by such a lovely day on arriving into port.

Early in the morning we could see the statue of Liberty holding out her torch toward the eastern continent. A little haze seemed to envelop her head, and as we looked at her from the deck of our ship, what pleasant memories it recalled! What a keen pleasure on reaching the shores of our adopted country to be refreshed with the sight of this magnificent work of art made by Bartholdi, a native of Colmar! Not far from it is the Brooklyn bridge, a structure the like of which cannot be found in any other country. On one side the gigantic structure, typical of the daring and enterprising genius of the American, on the other the matchless work of the French artist! What better gift could France have made to her older sister republic on the western continent? What better place could have been given it than the one it occupies, on the edge of Bedloe's island, greeting as it were with extended hand every fugitive from oppression and tyranny to the realms of a liberty-loving nation? Some people love to predict the decadence of France. Is it too much to say that there must be a noble spirit abroad in a country that, crippled by a terrible war, offers to a friendly nation that has enjoyed the blessings of freedom and self government this token of its faith in liberty as the basis of future progress? And how gratefully it was accepted by its older sister, and with the American genius for showing off everything to the best advantage, given a prominent place in the harbor of New York! Yes, there still lives in sunny France the same noble spirit that prompted Lafayette to cross the ocean and risk his life for the sake of helping a courageous people in their struggle for freedom and independence; and what a contrast between his action and that of our own thick-headed president that several years ago vetoed a bill to appropriate money to convey the free gifts of a generous people to the starving peasants of Russia, on the pretext that it was contrary to the constitution of the United States? Are we quite sure that our president has patriotism enough to fully understand the spirit of that document that was framed by its gallant and patriotic authors to benefit mankind and certainly never was intended to be so misinterpreted as to prevent a starving people from receiving the supplies bestowed upon them by a generous and charitable nation. And of late he has been doing everything in his power to thwart the efforts of a heroic people in their struggle to free themselves from unjust taxation, tyranny and oppression.

But let us rejoice, for his days of power are numbered, and when on the 4th of next March a true patriot and able statesman again occupies the presidential chair, may we not hope that in the future, as in the past, our worthy citizens will use their best endeavors to protect and encourage the human race in its struggle for justice and liberty, until in the time to come, the destiny of mankind being fully realized, we shall find comfort by every fireside and happiness in every home?

Muldoon's Picnic.

At the opera house last evening "Muldoon's Picnic" was greeted with a large and appreciative audience. The play is a very laughable Irish farce comedy in three acts and was well presented by the company. Geo. W. Rehn as Michael Muldoon and Walt McDonald as Michael Mulcahey were a pair that it would be hard to find an equal to, as they were both at home with their respective parts. The specialties introduced during the evening were all good and highly appreciated by those present.

Manager Sloan says the company last night played to the largest house that has been here for two years.—[Nebraska City Press.

Chang and Eng, the Siamese twins, died Jan. 17. When Chang died, Eng became so terribly shocked that he raved wildly and afterwards lay in a deadly stupor and in two hours was dead, some think by loss of blood flowing into the corpse of his brother—their bodies were joined by a band of flesh, stretching from the end of one breastbone to the same place in the opposite twin. They formed two distinct beings, but appeared most frequently to think, act and move as one individual. They were married to two sisters. Many of the children were deaf mutes.

U. S. Treasurer Spinner says that the country needs different amounts of currency at different times in the year, and suggests this method whereby the currency could be made self-adjusting: Issue legal-tender bills, convertible in bonds, bearing interest at 3.65 per cent or one cent a day on $100. In this case, those having a surplus could invest in these interest-bearing bonds, (which ought to be issued of as low a denomination as $25) and the same could be available in any emergency and at any time. When the currency should be needed it would always be forthcoming on presentation of the bonds, and when not needed, the conversion of it into bonds bearing interest would be virtually the same as depositing it on interest with a bank that always pays its depositors when called upon.
