"No wrong in it?" was the reply. Have your morals been so neglected that you can look upon a nude statue without seeing evil in it? And you, and you, and you?"

None of the crowd seemed to understand the speaker. Before any one could answer he rushed from the place, shouting as he went:

"It must come down!"

While the people were angrily asking one another what it all meant, an old gentleman with a book under his arm stepped forth and said:

"Your statue is indeed, my friends, in danger. A few such enemies of sweetness and light can burrow through the dirt and, as this person has threatened, overthrow it. He is one of those unfortunates who, in their efforts to purify the world, see so much of its vice that they become incapable of seeing its virtue. The evil that you could not find in the statue is in his own mind, which has, alas! been tainted by his contact with the vices he seeks to cure. Yet this downfall is owing to misguided attempts to do good. It should excite not your anger, but your pity."

VACATION SCHOOLS IN CITIES. A few years ago it would have seemed odd to choose the close of summer for a review of educational progress. But the summer schools have changed all that. To make a pretty good western hog, taking the whole animal's life from weaning until market, and speaking in a general way, it would be no bad idea to make one-fourth of the pig with clover, one-fourth with oats, bran. shorts and other food of growth, and one-half of corn, the balk of the latter to be fed late in the latter's life and chiefly after the preparation for market has been decided upon. This would mean very light feeding of corn during the growing period, the bulk of the food then consisting of feed stuffs more appropriate for growth making: feed than corn, and it can hardly be crowded too fast in the latter part of the feeding, the present tendency of
