The Omaha Bee for 1898.

The Omaha Weekly Bee is the leading paper in the Trans-Mississippi country. It will be much improved in 1898, enlarging some of its important departments. The price remains the same, 65 cents per year, 14 cents per week. The Bee prints 12 pages each week, publishing ALL the news of the week, both foreign and domestic; accurate market reports from all the centers of trade, giving special attention to the western country, as well as carefully selected articles of special interest to each individual member of the family.

The publishers of The Bee have made favorable arrangements with a number of the int ling publications of the country, which enables them to offer one or more of these publications with The Bee at nominal prices.

A Cure for Rinderpest.

It is reported that Dr. Alexander Edington, bacteriologist to the government of Cape Colony, South Africa, has discovered an effective preventive of animals affected with the disease, when treated with citric acid and kept long enough to insure the death of contagium, conferred immunity upon animals injected with it. Bile treated in the same way, with half its quantity of glycerine mixed with it, acted equally well. Animals injected with twenty cubic centimeters of either preparation proved immune from infection in a great majority of cases when virulent blood from animals suffering from rinderpest was afterwards injected. Dr. Edington, after experimenting on a small scale with perfect success, practiced his preventive method upon a number of large herds, and the highest mortality in any herd has been a little over 3 per cent. Ewes at Breeding Time.

Professor J. A. Craig, in a sheep bulletin published by the department of agriculture, says: "It is a general impression among shepherds that the condition of the ewes at the time of breeding has a marked influence on the succeeding crop of lambs. If the ewes are in vigorous condition and improving in flesh the prospects are thought to be favorable for the production of a large percentage of lambs. It is equally accepted that the condition of the ewes cheap for our profitable production by quarters, has an effect on the susceptibility of the flock to such diseases as are more or less prevalent during the and labor is so much cheaper than in winter season. It is certain that the America, we have always urged that ewes may be gotten into vigorous condition much more cheaply and easily than at any time later, and it is equally true that a vigorous condition is the best preventive of disease.
