Elias Howe's Great Work. When the civil war broke cut an immense meeting was held in Bridgeport, Conn., and many men volunteered for the army, says the Youth's Companion. To the general surprise, one of the richest men in the state, Elias Howe, the inventor of the sewing machine, arose and made this brief speech: "Every man is called upon to do what he can for his country. I don't know what I can do, unless it is to enlist and serve as a private in the Union army. I want no position; I am willing to learn and do what I can with a musket." But it soon proved that the chronic lameness from which Howe suffered incapacitated him from marching with a musket, even to the extent of standing sentry. Determined to serve the regiment as its postmaster, messenger and expressman. Sending home for a suitable horse and wagon he drove into Baltimore twice a day and brought to the camp its letters and parcels. It was said that he would run over half the state to deliver a letter to some lonely mother anxious for her soldier boy or bring back to him a pair of boots, which he

Brave to a superlative degree, line where I am now located; but it as those men were, with that flery seems to me that my bees, here in Central Kansas, do not go as far in search of honey as they did in Ohio, where I formerly kept them. In this I shall have to say "in general," for I know except in the highest ranks, where our of an exception. During last spring my bees visited a peach orchard, when the trees were in full bloom, miles from the apiary. But of course this was a very fine, calm day, and I do not hesitate to say that if it, were not for the prevailing winds of this country bees would go farther, and make a success of gathering honey much farther away than in hilly countries. I am firmly of the opinion that bees will secure a much greater crop same time they will get a good paying crop within three miles. Being situated three miles from alfalfa fields, the advantages would depend somewhat upon the direction you are located from the same. If the frequent winds come from the direction of the alfalfa, so that the loaded bees would come with the wind, it would be much better than if it were the other way. It takes a pretty strong wind to check the flight of honey bees if not laden with honey or pollen, but, on the other hand, when they are heavily loaded with honey or pollen they cannot make much headway in the wind. One thousand acres of alfalfa might supbees, but it would depend upon the manner in which the clover is handled. If harvested before or just at the time it comes into bloom, it would not be safe to risk any great number of colonies, unless there be other forage for the bees to live on outside of alfalfa.

Taffy, who belongs to the Third battalion of the Weish regiment, is a tremendous fellow, and marches at the head of the regiment. He was presented to the battalion by the queen in 1894. On one occasion he took umbrage at the presence of volunteers so close to his regiment, and in the course spection came across the guard tent. He proceeded to "turn out the guard,"

A German inventor, Ernest Salzberg. has made an improvement in incandescent gas burners which the United States consul at Crefeld thinks may prove of much importance. The invention depends upon the fact that when the pressure of the gas upon the incandescent body from which the light is derived is sufficiently increased the light becomes very intense, although agreeable to the eye. Gas is supplied he got a penny only put in an appearance to show his money and then took his custom elsewhere. If all stories be equal to that of more than 1,000 can- will pay $5 per week. dles.
