How to Make Poor Butter. Mrs. E. R. Wood tells, in the Jersey Bulletin, what she would do to make poor butter. The lady says: "I am not aware that I ever made any poor butter, and for nearly a score of years butter, from my hands, has brought 25 cents, or more, a pound the year round, which is, I think, evidence of its merit. However, were I to set out to make poor butter, the first thing I should do would be to let the milk (if set in pans) stand until it was covered with white spots, and the next would be to allow the cream to remain until it was a mass of fermentation before churning. Then, if the thermometer showed about 70 degrees, when inserted in the cream. and the churn smelled decidedly cheesy, I should know I was on the right track. When the butter had "come" in a soft, "squashy" mass would take it out of the churn and make a feint at washing it with cold water, salt it, and after only half getting out the buttermilk, pack it away. There would be streaks and mottles caused by insufficiently incorporating the salt, the remaining buttermilk would soon become rancid (for what more quickly gets to smell "old" than buttermilk?), the mold spores in the Some interesting facts have recently cream, in other words the bacteria, would begin to get in their work, and been compiled with reference to fishes which have the power of generating I would have poor butter in a very electric discharges.
