One day a dozen of a neighbor's hen flock came visiting and the geese entertained them. The chickens were corralled in a fence corner, and the geese flapped their wings and hissed, showing great joy when the chickens exhibited fear. Just then the farmer came out and began to feed his flock. Between hen-baiting and eating, these geese did not know what to do. They wanted to eat, and would begin to eat. Then the chickens would start away. That made the geese so uneasy that they could not eat. After a bit the chickens started along the fence toward a little stream of water with eighteen-inch high banks. On seeing this the geese stopped eating and ent to the stream and swam down it toward the spot for which the hens were headed, and ducked their heads so that the chickens couldn't see them. > School for Dairying. In the publicantion of the Agricultural College at Columbus is the following on the details of dairy study: It may interest some to know how the student spends his time while taking the course in dairying. The work begins at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at four o'clock in the afternoon. During the four morning hours the students are at work in the laboratory doing practical work. Some are running separators, some are churning butter, some are working butter, some are testing milk, some are bottling milk, some are pasteurizing milk, others are making cheese, while others are managing the boiler, the engines and the condenser, while all have experience in getting and keeping things clean-an extremely important lesson. Of course the students are changed about from day to day so that each becomes familiar with all operations. Forty or fifty earnest and energetic students dressed in their white duck suits make an attractive and inspiring sight. Indeed it is such an attraction that the problem of visitors has become a serious one. In the afternoons one to three o'clock the students listen to lectures or come prepared to recite the sessons that have been assigned them in their textbooks. Export Trade in American Horses.

Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture has been quoted as sayis a great question with the American farmer, and production for export is a most important phase of it; more so, perhaps, than many persons realize at present. We are daily coming into a position to be able to supply the world with not only food, but live animals. was much impressed with the necessity of an outlet abroad for our surplus and used to the best advantage. Forty horse production. For some time previous extremely low prices had prehorse breeders throughout the country were correspondingly depressed. They feared that owing to the adoption of the first nine months of 1898 was double that of the corresponding months of 1897. With this idea of increasing our export horse trade, I ordered as gathered as to the character and extent of the demand existing abroad for horses of all kinds. Without such specific knowledge it was evident that much unprofitable shipping would be done, not only causing a loss to shippers, but by placing undesirable animals on the European market, at least undesirable from the foreign standpoint, opinions unfavorable to American horses would be generated abroad. this trade. I have interested our representatives in foreign countries and other parties in positions to report conditions intelligently, and we have received a great deal of information on the subject. This information is ample to satisfy any one who studies it that a demand exists in Europe, which should afford great encouragement to American horse raisers, but that in or-view I read a communication from a lady correspondent, who said she could not get her hens to eat broken crockery. I think that her hens were not brought up right. I would like to give you my geese jumped into the air with flapping experience in feeding grit to hens: wings and tried to catch one of the I began feeding grit about ten years chickens, but they were too slow, and ago. First I broke up bones for them, the chickens went over the fence like and the hens soon learned to come scared crows. If the geese had when they heard the sound of the caught the chicken the feathers would hatchet. I then broke up earthenware have flown, for the geese delighted in and found they ate it as greedily as plucking the feathers out of a captive. they did the bone. I then tried them with broken glass, such as comes from the tops of fruit cans, and found they ate that. I also gave them common glass and white flint stone. I have had fifty hens eat two half-gallon glass cans in one day without any injurious effect. If hens do not have food suitable for the production of eggs they will eat but little grit; but if they are in condition to lay, one hen will eat a tablespoonful every two or three days. A good way to break glass or flint stone is to heat them very hot, and then drop them in water till they will break easily. But with earthenware it is different, as the hens do not eat it if it is heated to a point where it is blackened.

Wasting Capital.—Capital is by no means an unmixed blessing to the would-be poultry raiser. My earnest belief is, that in the majority of cases the chief use of capital is to furnish something to throw away; for one who is interested is sure to think of so many hundred seemingly desirable things, that capital melts away into thin air at an alarming rate; wheremust pay their own expenses or make none, their owner will have learned to save his money or to invest it judiciously, by the time he has any surplus to handle for anything besides feed Limited Supply of Dairy Cows .-There are less cattle in proportion to at any time in the past few years. When this condition is coupled with cattle. On Friday forenoons instead the fact that the raising of a profitable herd of dairy cows is a slow work, it can be readily seen that there is no branch of farming which actually hoids better than dairying. Just apply this consideration to any calculations respecting the promising outlook for either wheat, wool or cattle (beef) raising, and then keep out of the throng that is about to rush pelimell into one or the other of these last named branches.-Ex.

Locomotor Ataxia & Paralysis Can be Cured.

These extreme nervous disorders were treated with wonderful success by the discoverer of Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People, previous to his discovery being offered to the public generally. This remedy is the only known specific in many diseases that, until recent years, were pronounced incurable. Mere is the proof:

James Crocket, a sturdy old Scotchman living in Detroit, Mich, at 88 Montcalm St., was cured of Locomotor Ataxia by these pills. For many years he has been a chief engineer of one of those big passenger palace steamers plying upon the great lakes. This is a position of great responsibility and the anxiety causes a great nervous strain. Mr. Crocket says: "For fifteen years I watched the big engines and boilers without a single accident, and only noticed that I was getting nervous. Suddenly without warning I was taken sick, and was prostrated. I had the best of physicians but grew gradually worse. At a council of doctors, they said I had nervous prostration, and had destroyed my whole nervous system and would never recover. For three years I was unable to move from my bed. The doctor said I had locomotor ataxia, and would never be able to walk again.

"The pains and suffering I experienced during those years are almost indescribable. The friends that came to see me bid me good-bye when they left me and I was given up. The doctors said nothing more could be done. My wife kept reading to me, articles about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. We finally decided to try them. The first box gave me relief. I continued to use them for about two years before I could get strength enough to walk. I am nearly seventy-five years old and there is not a man in this city that can kick higher or walk further than I can and to-day I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for they saved my life."—Detroit Evening News.
