No more marked change in the theatrical business in recent years has been tory for David City, the score being 36 noted than the very decided upward to 0. On next Saturday they will meet | trend of that branch of it known as the "Vaudeville." Some years ago the term "variety" was thought synonymous to that which was coarse and vulgar. To a certain extent this was true, but with the recruiting from the "legitimate" ranks of actors and actresses of standing in the operatic and dramatic fields the Vaudevilles took on a more healthy complexion. There is no reason why this should not be so. A Vandeville performance is made up today to afford amusement for the greatest number. There is little or no attempt at plot. There is no strain on the mental faculties. You come there to be entertained, and you are, without an effort on your part. You hear good singing and see beautiful costumes. Walter J. McDonald has introduced "Vaudeville" in his farce-comedy "Gilhooley's Reception." It has proved a success. The people want it and he is reaping the benefit by pleasing his patrons. Reserved seats are now on sale at Pollock's drug store.
