Duhamel, Jan. 24, 1900. Dear Sir and Friend-We had a lucky trip, made good connections and got to Wetaskiwin Monday afternoon; stayed there all night, bought a pony and saddle for the boy and hired a three-seated rig for the balance of us, and got home to dinner next day; caught the boys cleaning up and getting ready to come after us. Wednesday the snow was all gone and we had bare ground and bright sunshine for a month, and it has been pleasant weather ever since. The ground is frozen about two feet and about six inches of snow-just enough for good sleighing. We had one cold spell in December. The thermometer went down to 32 below zero, but we did not suffer with the cold at all. We have worked every day all winter, are all well and feeling well; have built a log house 18x18, two log stables 16x18, and are now busy on a well. We have 10 cows, three other cattle and six head of horses. The boys send their best respects to Mr. Huchison, and say they will talk to him enough to pay for not writing when he gets up here; will write you again next spring and tell you all about the winter. We all unite in sending you and family our best wishes and respects and hope this will find you all well.

Yours very respectfully, THOMAS TATE, Duhamel, Alberta, Canada. P. S .- It has not been down to zero this month, It is 22 above now.

I have found that spring pruning gives better fruit-that contains growth matter. Water sprouts and those not coming out where wanted should be rubbed off the spring, while yet in the bud stage. The real winter protection is so growing the tree that the wood well ripened and hardened up to stand the winter. The man that permits the foliage of his trees to be damaged by insects or diseases will have trees with wood only partly ripened, and such will have less power to stand hard winter conditions than will the trees that have had good foliage to ripen up their wood. Q. Do you recommend puddling the roots of all trees before setting? A .- Yes, sir. But perhaps I should not say all trees. However, I do not know any other way of getting good capillarity, that is, getting the roots so intimately connected with the dire that capillary attraction can operate between them. This does not mean that we should make a thick, heavy mud to hold the roots. Would not you, Mr. Kellogg, puddle your trees before setting?

Q.-How deep is it advisable to cul-

Grass sod in the orchard | mer, so that there may be worms of is very injurious to the trees, especially at times of the year when soil water is deficient and trees have to depend to some extent on the occasional showers. In that case the roots of the grass drink up about all of the moisture before it gets down to the roots. I have dug up sod in the orchard hours after a good shower and found that not one drop had got within reach of the roots of the trees; every blade of grass was acting as a pump, pumping the moisture back into the atmosphere. There are multitudes of trees that by reason of the sod beneath them are thirsty most of the time during the growing season. You must remember that not a particle of food can enter the tree except by being carried in water; therefore you can starve a tree to death by depriving it of water. The reason that so many orchards in grass are moderately successful is because they get in the springtime the water from melting snow and from spring rains, and for a part of the growing season have all the water they can use. But they remain thirsty for a large part of the season. Q.-Can't you extend the season of ultivation if the cultivation is light? Mr. Hatch-Professor Bailey says that the orchard should not be cultivated after midsummer. Q.-Can we make trees bear alternate years?

Mr. Hatch-Yes. If the trees are going to bear this year we can prune a part of them and prevent them from bearing a crop this year; they will then probably bear next year.

There is a time in the history of every country when superficial farming pays better than any other kind of farming, or at least that is the opinion we hold without giving the assertion a systematic investigation. That time is when inhabitants are few and the rich lands free and abundant. The land is pastured over superficially, plowed superficially and cropped over superficially. The results are satisfactory. The new settlers, living in log cabins that cost nothing but labor, pay no taxes to speak of, and find it possible to get all the clothing and other necessities from the products of their own lands or flocks or herds. With all wants abundantly supplied there is no inducement to do anything but superficial farming. The fathers transmit their methods to their sons, and they to succeeding generations. and that mode of farming becomes fixed. In time the methods come to be regarded as "orthodox" for all con-

Meantime people become more numerous and land scarce. Populations crowd each other and the value of land rises. Taxes multiply, and the farm expenses become items of the old-style farmers cannot solve. The customs of generations, however, prove strong, and the multitude of farm owners will hang to them, even to the point of seeing their farms slip away into the hands of the mortgagors. Superficial farming must be discardchanged people and times. It cannot give revenue enough to meet the obligations that the new conditions impose. Superficial tillage must give way maining.

Feeding Fat lato Milk. The New Zealand Dalryman, commenting on the attempts to feed fat into milk, says:

In 1874-77 the great German investideclare I haven't! And he chuckled at the thought that gator Keuhu, feeding cows on palm nut meal in particular, and also malt his mother hadn't accused him of putsprouts, peanut meal and cottonseed ting the jam into him.-N. Y. Herald.

In 1879 the same learned investigator, after further experimenting, changed his views and wrote: "The system of feeding is only of secondary impertance for milk production; the yield of milk is primarily dependent on the development or productive capacity of the milk glands of each cow, and even with changes from light to heavy feed the supply does not increase in proportion to the nutriment supplied. The same holds true where the farmer aims to increase any single component of milk-as fat-since it is not possible or any other component in the milk by changes in the system of feeding. No such changes can, at any rate, be reached as of practical importance." soils. Cultivation should begin early the most careful investigators the

This investigator fed one lot of his cows heavily with sugar meal, a byproduct of the glucose factory, giving to another lot a lighter feed of mixed grain; then the conditions were reversed. Analysis showed apparently in some cases that the cows had increased as much as .5 of one per cent butter-fat, and the conclusion of th one of the feeds which would surely increase the fat percentage of milk. But all the cows on the trial did not pile up more data another experiment was undertaken with sugar meal as one of the feeds. This time there was no increase in fat, and the investigator ceased his contentions that sugar meal fed to cows would put fat into their

One of the worst pests that the apple grower has to fight is the railroad worm, called also the pulp worm, and the apple maggot, says a communication from the Vermont Experiment Station. The fruit growers of Vermont are unanimous in giving this insect the first rank among their insect enemies. It is worse than the tent caterpillar. That can be entirely overcome by spraying, whereas spraying has no effect on the railroad worm. all ages in the apples. She has a strong preference for sweet apples, and has practically ruined the crop of Talmans last year. Still she works in all varieties, sour as well as sweet, and causes hundreds of dollars' loss to the fruit grower. The authorities at the Vermont Experiment Station frankly admit that no satisfactory way of dealing with it has been discovered. They say that considerable good can be accomplished by keeping hogs or sheep in the orchard to pick up the windfalls, These windfalls are usually full of apple maggots, and the hogs digest them out of existence. Experiments are being made at various places in the United States, and we hope eventually to know some more effective way of dealing with this pest. But for the present we must rely on the practice of destroying the windfalls. Tillage Value of Subsolt. The value of the subsoil for tillage purposes must always depend on its local character. subsoil, but this difference varies so greatly that in some cases the term subsoil is almost identical with the term soil. The soil is that part of the ground lying nearest the air, and is composed of pulverized rock, humus, animal remains and minute particles of still undecayed vegetable matter. Being nearest the air the elements of the air, which tend to break up the rocky material in which the plant food is bound up, can operate. The frosts take hold earliest and remain longest. The subsoil is that lying below, and consists generally of rock, with little regetable matter, and little opportunity for action by the frosts of winter, the heat of summer or the elements of the air. There are, however, exceptions in some of our prairies, and wherever the soil has been deposited to great depth by action of water in swamps and rivers. There are subsolis that may, by deep plowing, be incorporated with the soil to great advantage, since their texture is similar, and since they contain both some vegetable matter and mineral elements set loose by chemical action. When it is possible to use such soils for cultural purposes, underdraining will be found to make them more available. In many localities the subsoil is so heavy that its incorporation with the surface soil would prove a detriment.
