man mentions, in an exchange, that he ordered a large number of winter varieties of apple trees, and among them only ten summer varieties. When the trees came into bearing he found that he had 225 trees of summer varieties. This is very discouraging to the planter of orchards and it re-acts on the nurseries. If the farmers were sure always of getting the trees they buy, they would plant far more extensively than they do at the present time.

A western fruit grower tells a new plan for stopping the formation of wood in the fall. He deals with prune trees principally. He says: "The scheme was to twist the limbs so as to break the wood and not crack the check its growth and not let it bleed. Inis, Mr. Porter says, would permit the limbs to grow in thickness and not n length. This was done in August. I note the effect and believe it would be beneficial for all trees that grow so tall and spindling to twist them back in season so as to permit the wood to mature and the body to grow before the winter sets in. This treatment is not expensive and the effect can be noticed by anyone trying it. Last season I tried it on a few trees and the effect was marvelous. I can now go and cut just below the twist and give the top a perfect bell shape, being careful to twist them properly."

Something should be done by repu table nurserymen to prevent the sale of orchard trees not true to name. One

The people that advocate the planting of apple trees along the roadside are very philanthropic-by proxy. They are willing that farmers and other men interested in the growing of fruit should purchase trees at their own expense and set them out to grow fruit for the public. But we know in what manner such philanthropy is repaid. As soon as the trees get large enough to blossom the limbs are broken off by whoever comes along, for the sake of having the bloom-laden branches in the home for a few brief hours. What is left of the tree ultimately bears fruit that is picked before ripe by some man who is afraid if he leaves it some other man will get it. The public, in such cases, ruthless'y plunders and destroys. The man that has set out the trees can haruly be expected to go to the further ex-pense of putting a guard over them. Moreover, fruit trees set by the wayside are, in this country, almost invariably set in sod, and are uncared for in the respect of cultivation. The fruit for others, nor can he afford to Cornstalk Diseases, The Division of Animal Pathology o the Nebraska Experiment Station has received, within the past few weeks, more inquiries regarding the disease in cattle known as "cornstalk disease" than it has received before during the past five years. The inquiries show that a great loss has been sustained by the feeding of cornstalks. This is one of the mysterious liseases that seem to baffle the scientists. The division issued a bulletin in 1898 on this subject, which discusses the various of a few new theories that are being advanced this year. There have been quite a number of nquiries as to whether this disease germs of typhoid fever. could be caused by chirch bugs, for it has been reported that cattle have died in stalks that were heavily infected with these insects. As near as can be told, this has little or nothing to do with it, because there are numerous outbreaks where the fields were apparently free from this pest.

A question that is asked in almost every case is, whether it is safe to turn in cattle after a heavy frost. From past experience it can be said that the frost has very little to do with it, for cattle have died in stalks in very severe, cold weather, so for that reason could not recommend the use of stalks simply from their having been frosted. The only reasonably saie suggestion that can be given to any one that wishes to pasture his cattle in stalks is, to not exclusively feed them on stalks, but to provide some grain ration-either hay or oats or straw. By this is not meant that the animals should be allowed to run at will to a straw stack, because there is some danger in that; but they should be compelled to be in an enclosure for a certain length of time, and during that time should be allowed no cornstalks, but should be given hay, alfalfa, straw

Another inquiry that is always made tacked? In almost all cases the treatment is of no avail, because the animals are dead before treatment can be administered. In cases where the symptoms indicate a brain affection. give chloral hydrate in repeated doses at intervals of from half an hour to three-quarters of an hour apart, as long as the symptoms may require. Give from an ounce and a half to two ounces at a dose. Mix the chloral with a little linseed water or flour water, and give in about a pint to a quar of water as a drench. Many cases have been cured by this heroic treatment. Cattle in Lee, Washington and Fayette countles, Texas, have been dying of an unknown disease, which is thought to be tetanus or lockjaw. Mr. Marcus Daly's interests in the trotter were ten times greater than in runners, and he died the owner of by far the greatest collection of trotting brood mares ever gotten together. According to an Oshkosh farmer very few cattle will be wintered in that part already commenced to be felt. Notwithstanding its splendid equip-mentand fine shipping facilities, the big packing plant at New Brighton, Minn., is closed, except the feeding pens used by cattle shippers. Fire recently swept over the ranches in Sherman and adjoining Texas counties. A score or more were burned over and all feed consumed. The burned area is estimated to be forty miles long and six wide. Most of the cattle were saved, but will have to be transferred to new feeding grounds. The animal must have a certain amount of feed to produce heat and energy, and this can be more cheaply secured from carbohydrates. Protein is necessary to replace the wastes of cut. A good workman will, it is said, the body, to form flesh and to enable milk-producing animals to give maximum and continuous milk yields. Special use of carbohydrates: carbohydrates, besides being the principal source of heat and energy, serve as the chief source of fat.

Special use of fat: Experiments have proved that fat yields two and onehalf times as much heat as the carbohydrates. Animal fat is also formed from the fat of the feed, but as a rule not directly; i. e., the fat molecule is more or less pulled to pieces and reconstructed. The lives of none of our farm animals can be sustained by protein, fat, carbohydrates or ash alone: and yet protein, carbohydrates and ash of the feed are all absolutely necessary to sustain life and produce growth. Experiments proving the above facts teach us that for the securing of specific ends, such as the production of flesh, fat or milk, taese several groups of substances as found in our various agricultural plants should not for economical reasons be fed hap-hazard, but father in reasontwo months to effect a complete cure, aby definite proportions, depending Cattle Too Poor to Ship. The cattle of Arizona are so poor on account of the short pasturage caused by drought that the Southern Pacific, it is reported, has issued an order that cattle from Arizona destined to points in Texas on the Texas & Pacific road, cannot be accepted for through shipments, because the T. & P. refuses to take the cattle, owing to their poor condition. The order recommends that shippers prepay to El Paso, locally, and that the shippers there m:ke their arrangements with the officers of the T. & P. for further shipments. This order practically suspends shipments by this route from Arizona. The recent rains have done much good, and it is said that cattle are rapidly recovering with plenty of green grass and a good outlook for winter feed.

It is calculated that the cotton crop of the south this season will yield $500,-000,000 in cotton and seed and $100,-000,000 worth of oil. An ancient philosopher once said:
