

"I cannot say enough in regard to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound It has done me more good than all the doctors. I have been troubled with female weakness in its worst form for about ten years. I had leucorrhoea and was so weak that I could not do my housework.

I also had falling of the womb and inflammation of the womb and ovaries, and at menstrual periods I suffered terribly. At times my back would ache very hard. I could not lift anything or do any heavy work; was not able to stand on my feet long at a time. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for doctors but they did me no good. My husband's sister wrote what the Vegetable Compound had done for her, and wanted me to try it, but I did not then think it would do r e any good. After a time, I concluded to try it, and I can truly say it does all that is claimed for it. Ten bottles of the Vegetable Comand seven packages of Sanative Wash have made a new woman of me, I have had no womb trouble since taking the fifth bottle. I weigh more than I have in years; can do all my own housework, sleep well, have a good appetite, and now feel that life is worth living. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Veg-etable Compound. I feel that it has saved my life and would not be without it for anything. I am always glad to recommend it to all my sex, for I know if they will follow Mrs. Pinkham's directions, they will be cured." Gratefully yours, MRS. ANNIE THOMPSON, South Hot Springs, Ark.

-P. G. S. in Chicago Journal.

Watering Rogs In the hygicalc management of the horse it has been found that the best esults from feeding follow where the nimal is only allowed to drink prior to a meal. This is a subject that so far as we are aware has not been sufficiently considered as regards the management of hogs. The stomach of the pig is somewhat similar to that of the horse, so that it requires comparatively small amounts of food at frequent intervals. Its capacity is but from one and one-half to two gallona and, like that of the horse, digestion of grain goes on therein rather than in the intestines, which in the pig are about 72 feet long, counting large and small intestines together. It stands to reason that when the stomach contains that amount of food which it can carving. properly care for as regards digestion, it also contains the average supply of gastric juice necessary for the perfect digestion of the food so far as it is carried out in the stomach. If at this time of repletion, when digestion is going on, the hog is allowed to drink all it cares to of water, we must conclude that loss is entailed by this act. The water taken into the stomach does not all stay there, even when the stomach is empty. A large portion of it passes into the large intestines, so that water taken just after a hearty meal must of necessity wash part of the undigested food into the intestines, and here it cannot possibly be as fully digested as it would have been in the stomach proper. We conclude, therefore, that there is a loss from feeding corn meal and at the same time allowing the hogs to drink all the water they care to take. If this idea is correct, then the proper way to feed would be to give the hogs all the water they want before feeding and keep the pupils to make them smart. water away from them after and hinder them from drinking water until the meal is digested. It is a fact that hogs require much less water when fattening upon corn meal than they do when living upon other meals, such as rye or barley meal. If they require one part of water when eating corn meal they require one and three-quarters parts of water when eating barley meal. Although this is the case, there 3.
