WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1901.

William McKinley, the central figure and the controlling force in the greatest epoch of prosperity and progress recorded in the history of the human race.—American Economist.

NEBRASKA is a state that has been one of the worst sufferers from the corn crop failure, yet here is what an Omaha special says of financial and commercial conditions there: "Not in ten years has demand in Nebraska so great as it is now. The surplus in state banks is greater by $500,000 than in any previous year. Bankers report that nearly made at 8 per cent. This is considered extraordinary in view of the fact that so much money is had in different sections of the state. The stiff interest rate, however, is due to the increased demand for short loans. Money is being invested in immense sums through Nebraska today. The stock interests alone are consuming millions of dollars. A great deal of building is going on. Many second mortgages are being made and the mortgages held by eastern firms paid off with home loans. This is said to be the secret of much of the loans that are being made."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It can be stated with absolute certainty that the Platte river canal scheme is settled. The canal will be built, and dirt will be flying in its construction early in 1902, whatever may be the outcome of the consolidation project. According to those best informed about the entire situation, it is a ten to one shot that the entire proposition will go through, but the canal part of it is no longer in the list of uncertainties. The positive assertion of one of the eastern men of millions, was "we will build it that is settled."—Lincoln Journal.

The suggestion that McKinley's pictures appear on the two-cent postage stamp is not to be carried into effect, at least not yet, but it has been decided to put his portrait on ten dollar bills. It is a fact that during his administration more ten-dollar bills have been scattered throughout the country than during a like period under any other president or under any other ruler of any other country and it is fitting that he should be commemorated in this manner.—Fremont Tribune.

Jenkins at Cadiz, Ohio.
Since E. H. Jenkins and party have reached Cadiz, Harrison county, Ohio, we get the same number of letters as before, but the time seems to be taken up mainly with visiting relatives, feasting, music, etc., so that few scraps of general news reach us from "the little city set among the hills in eastern Ohio."

The corner-stone of the new court house there was laid in 1883, and the structure completed October 1, 1885. It has twenty-four large rooms, is three stories high, and 100x100 feet on the ground and has in it a fine town clock. The building cost $100,000, with about $20,000 added for furniture. However, it is lacking in one respect, as it has no vaults for records, although they think it practically fire-proof. We saw in the recorder's office deeds that were recorded as early as 1816. We are told that this is about the same up-to-date county court house in the state of Ohio, and the people here are proud of it.

Sweet corn sells at 10c a dozen; potatoes $1.25, poor crop; peaches 50c a bushel, and all good housewives are stirring peach butter in their brass kettles; plums are selling for $1 per bushel, but they are fine Damson; tomatoes are worth 50c per bushel and plentiful; apples 75c, but not a good crop. Corn is selling at retail at about 6c and as they have no hogs or cattle to sell there is no market. Wool is still a chief feature, and there are a number of parties here who do nothing but buy wool. Some of them handle from four to five hundred thousand pounds per year. It all comes from farmers; washed, and sacked in large sacks.

New dwelling houses here, as a rule, are larger than at Columbus. The foundations are of stone and the roofs mostly of slate. Groceries, clothing, etc., is about equal in price to Columbus, but beef-steak is 18c a pound, and ham 22c. The Cadiz fair is noted in this part of the world—the third of the three being the great day of the exhibit. By noon there were at least 5,000 people at the grounds and 1,000 horses in single and double rigs, many of them coming twenty miles, some from Wheeling and other towns far away. Many people came for the races alone, some of which were good, races and trotters making the mile in 2:25.

Friday evening, October 4, in the Adams neighborhood on the clear fork of Stillwater about six miles from Cadiz, in company with Barclay Welch and J. C. Moore, I saw an oil well "shot." The usual charge is 80 quarts of glycerine, but in this one they put 120 quarts, enough to blow the city of Columbus into kingdom come if it were exploded on top of the ground, but at the bottom of an oil well 1253 feet deep it does not make much of a report, but sends gas, oil, dirt and small stones over the top of the derrick to a height of 120 feet above ground, and it is a grand sight. The glycerine is put down in tin tubes. I was at the foot of the tubes, to see what the stuff looked like, and did not know what minute I might be blown to fragments, over the hills. The glycerine looks very much like this honey of a lightish color. The oil is found under the stratum of Berea rock, which underlies this whole country. The well we saw shot is the fourth one in the field, and they are pumping from ten to twelve barrels per day from each and the oil is worth now around $1.50 per barrel and is taken right from the well by the Standard Oil company through pipes to Pittsburg. I am told the company pipe the oil clear from here to Philadelphia and in fact this whole region is covered with gas pipe, for either gas or oil. At the wells are large wooden tanks holding about 100 barrels of oil. When full, a company man is sent who gives receipt for amount of water and the oil is let into the company pipe line and taken

The pleasant town of Get There lies far up a rocky hill, across the middle of Cozage and above the swamp of Will.
The post that leads to Get There leaves the pleasant thoroughfare.
And wander off 'mid rocks that grid and brine
vines that bear,
And through pines along the road that leads to Newburyville.
And grumble at the few who climb to Get There on the hill.
And others start the theory path and seek the town to gaze,
But fail at the swamp of Will and turn them back in pain.
Oh, happy town of Get There shining in the morning sun.
You only show the taller how yet higher peaks are won.
The truest promise you give for self-denying years
Is but the promise old, yet new, that conquers doubts and fears.
For no one lives at Get There, but with heart and soul, and looks like there would be a big crowd.
The monument was put in place yesterday. A marble base of three pieces, the bottom one weighing twenty-one tons, being two feet thick. The statue is of bronze, nine feet high, with right arm extended as in delivering a speech, the left resting on a small table. Senator Forsaker is to make the address, and the afternoon program is to be followed with a banquet in the evening.

So you see that a field of twelve or fifteen wells that are all pumped by one engine and time, say ten barrels each, run into money.
Today, October 5 is Bingham monument day, and it looks like there would be a big crowd. The monument was put in place yesterday. A marble base of three pieces, the bottom one weighing twenty-one tons, being two feet thick. The statue is of bronze, nine feet high, with right arm extended as in delivering a speech, the left resting on a small table. Fatal Accident.
Friday night about 11:30, in the Union Pacific yards west of the coal chutes, Robert A. Wagner's left foot became so jammed in the machinery that he could not extricate himself, but had the left leg crushed, and seemingly all the tendons of his body fearfully wrenched. He was immediately taken to the office of Dr. Martyn, Evans & Gear, and the lower part of the limb amputated by Dr. Martyn and son, and Dr. Hansen, assisted by Ferd. Stires.
At 1:30 he was taken to his residence on Fourteenth street and amputation was made of the leg close to the body, but blood-poisoning set in and the sufferer, conscious to the very last, found relief in death at 6:30 Saturday evening, the physicians in the meantime doing everything that could be done for his comfort.
The funeral services were held at the Catholic church this Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock with burial in the nearby cemetery.
Robert A. Wagner was born at Ottawa, Illinois, December 23, 1865, and was consequently in the thirty-sixth year of his age. He came to Nebraska in 1884, and has since made this city his home. He was married October 12, 1889, to Miss Emma Gregoria, and leaves to mourn his departure to the Spirit Land, his widow and son, Leonard, ten years of age, besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wagner, his brother Jacob and sister, Mrs. J. Greisen.

He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, the Highlanders and the Orpheus society, members of the latter two attending the funeral as organizations.

A California Opportunity.
September 19th to 27th, both dates inclusive, any Burlington Route ticket agent will sell you a round trip ticket to San Francisco at LESS THAN THE REGULAR ONE-WAY RATE.
The occasion is the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, and the rate is open to the general public as well as to delegates to the convention.
No more delightful outing can be imagined. The trip is made at a time of year when traveling is a pleasure and the climate of California at its best.
The return limit—November 16, 1901, is an unusually long one for tickets sold at so low a rate. Stop overs are allowed at pleasure, both going and returning, and at west of the first Colorado, Wyoming or Montana point en route. All in all, the opportunity is one which no man or woman who contemplates a visit to California can afford to overlook.
Folder giving details mailed on request. Burlington ticket agents are in a position to give any further information that may be desired.

This Is Your Chance.
In order to introduce it into your home The Semi-Weekly State Journal will be mailed from now until January 1, 1902, for only twenty-five cents. This will give you a paper every Tuesday and Friday and will be almost as good as a daily. It will give you all the markets, which just now is a valuable feature, worth to every farmer many times the cost of the paper. The Journal is printed at the state capital and is more of a state paper than any of its competitors. It prints the news of the world fresh from special wires in its own office and prints it twice a week, while it is fresh and doesn't charge you any more for it than does the old-fashioned weekly. Send your quarter to The State Journal, Lincoln, Neb.

Yellowstone Park Classes Sept. 15.
Go now if you would see Yellowstone Park before the season closes.
No better time of year than this. Everything is at its best—weather, roads and scenery.
It takes only about ten days to make the trip, and by going in August you can exchange the heat of a Nebraska summer for the cool, sweet air of the mountains.
Write to J. Francis, General Passenger Agent, Burlington Route, Omaha, Neb., for folder giving full information about the Park. It contains a large map of the Park, as well as a description of the principal points of interest.
Extension rates daily—ask the ticket agent about them.
