Call it that in Chicago where he lives, and they wouldn't know whom you were talking about. The author himself pronounces him name as though it were spelled "Aid."

FAMOUS OLD FORT. will soon be cut up into farms. Some famous battles have been fought round Fort Cobb, and some desperate chances have been taken there by white men in settling up the country surrounding the historic old spot. In 1861 Fort Cobb, Arbuckle and Washita were the principal trading posts and government forts west of the Mississippl river. The headquarters of the military department of the Texas were located at Fort Cobb, and its soldiers tier,as well as guarding against Indian uprisings along the Washita and Litits greatest fame because of the surat the outbreak of the civil war. Gen. Twiggs was at the time the commander of the United States forces in the gepartment of the Texas, and on Feb-

The latter were to approach under the guise of hostile Comanches, and make a feint at attack, when the post would be surrendered to them without resistance. When Maj. Sturgis learned of this he resolved upon the burning of the ammufalling into Confederate possession. He succeeded in carrying out his plan, but barely escaped with his life. In October, 1862, Fort Cobb again came into notice, because of a fight between the Cherokees as southerners and the Seminoles as loyal Indians. Several hundred were killed in battle, the Seminoles finally winning. The Cherokees soon afterward freed their slaves of their own accord and gave them the right of citizenship. The battle determined the status of the Indians-they nearly all Lecame Unionists. Up to that time the Cherokee, Choctaw and tween them and the Seminoles and Creeks. In 1870 the old fort was abandoned, but has since then been used as a rendezvous for travelers and in- graph. dian agents. It has been the place where artists and writers centered upon their arrival in the land of the southern Indian to study his traits. day wooed and won his Cherokee bride; here it was that John Howard

DECORATES HIS OWN GRAVE. Few indeed have the strange privilege of decorating their own graves. Such a person, however, is to found in Corona, L. I. He enlisted in the Flushing Regiment and in the battle of Vicksburg was hit with the fragment of a shell. For a whole day he lay in the trenches. They thought him dead. When he came to, his mind and memory were gone. Strangers found him and asked him who he was. He could not tell. He was like a child. He was transferred, and after the war was taken to the soldiers' home in Washington. There he learned once more to read and write, to converse and on shipboard?" "Well, yes; but we had

"What battle?" they asked. "Why, the battle I was in to-day.

They told him that he had thirty years before. He had been restored to his former identity. All memory of the intervening years now faded as completely as that which had gone before had faded previously. "Who are you " they asked. He told them. Then he started the long journey back to Long Island, in search of his former home and friend.

Arriving at Flushing, one of the first objects that met his gaze was the soldiers' monument. It stands in front of the old Quaker meeting-house,dated 1661, and which was used alternately as a federal and a British stronghold during the revolution. The old man naturally paused and read the familiar names of his martyred comrades. To his consternation he saw his own name enrolled there. That was some years ago. Since that day the old veteran has never missed Decoration day in Flushing. He comes with a big wreath and lays it on the mound under his own name.

SOLDIERS ARE HUMAN

Army officers are almost unanimous in asking the restoration of the canteen feature of the army post exchanges. The subject is a sore one with temperance and prohibition advocates, whose position concerning the canteen is much misunderstood. The objection they make is that the canteen gives a sort of official sanction to drink-in other words, puts the government into the business of selling beer. Advocates of the canteen assert that it cannot possibly be harmful, because only beer is sold, and that of a good quality, and in such quantities and under such restriction as to render intoxication impossible. Experience indicates that for many reasons the advocates of the canteen have the better of the argument. Soldiers are human; and like many other human beings are averse to too much restriction. Few of them acquire the habit of drinking in the army; indeed, with saloons on every corner in the cities from which most of them come, it is not likely that they would acquire habits of intemperance through buying an occasional bottle of beer at the canteen. As matters are, a soldier cannot drink in the post, but there is prices per unit of quantity have deside. his old self. His first question was are mostly grades or some mixed breed. Probably afty per of the farmers raise horses and they find the drafts the most profitable. A few raise carriage horses, but they are not as salable as the heavier horses: The supply of colts is about what it was before horses got so chesp. The present supply of marketable horses is considerably short of former years; for when the prices of horses fell so low; fewer colts were raised for two or three years and that has shortened the present supply. Except a few cases of distemper, no disease prevails and the condition of horses is good. John W. Brucker, Calumet County, Wis.: About one-fourth of our farmers raise colts, but not every year; perhaps one-half of that quarter raise colts every other year; still we have more 3year-old colts than we had in 1894. We also have some three-year-oldspossibly half as many as our stock of two-year-olds. They are mostly roaddemand and we have now some heavy Percherons and Clydes. The supply of horses that are ready for market is not as large as in previous years, was completely cured in a few days. though there are always some horses for sale. Horses are generally healthy and in good condition. J. E. Gray, Louisa County, Iowa: Relative to the supply of horses in our neighborhood, would say almost every farmer raises colts of some kind, mostly draft colts, say about threefourths of them. There are also some roadsters and a small number of coach horses. Horses of marketable condition are scarce and command good prices-$150 to $200 a head at home. Imports of Raw Material

American manufacturers are evidently quite as busy in 1901 as they were in 1900. At least this is a reasonable conclusion from an examination of the figures of the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, which show that the total imports of manufacturers' materials in the nine months ending with September, 1901, were greater in value than those of the corresponding months of last year, although an analysis of the imports, article by article, shows that in many cases the strongly marked that in many cases while the figures of value show a decrease in the nine months of 1901. as compared with those of 1900, the figures of quantity for the same period show an increase. For instance, imports of India rubber when measured by value show a slight reduction in 1901 as compared with 1900, while the quantity imported in 1901 shows an increase of more than 5,000,000 pounds as compared with the same months of 1900. Pig tin, used in manufacturing tin plate, shows in value a slight reduction in the imports of 1901 as compared with last year, but in quantity there is an increase of over 2,000.000 pounds. Imports of unmanufactured fibers show a decrease of more than $2,000,000 in value as compared with those of 1900, yet the quantity shows a material increase. Taking the grand total of value of imports of raw materials for use in manufacturing, the imports in the nine months of 1901 compared with those of 1900 were: For 1901, $221,469,984; for 1906, $217,619,372; while in the month of September alone the figures of the month in 1901 are $22,725,325, against $18,505,980 in September 1900 a marked increase. They formed in September, 1901, 34 per cent of the total imports, against 31 per cent of the total imports in September, 1900. The British Islands may yet become a good market for American-grown potatoes. Until recently the United Kingdom has produced enough tubers for its own use, but signs are not wanting that a change in this matter is taking place. For the last ten years only about 1 per cent of the potato supplies have been imported, and these have come mainly from the Channel Islands. During the last three years the supplies of foreign potatoes on the English market have increased to 9 per cent. The yield per acre, as well as the total yields of potatoes in Great Britain and Ireland, will prove of interest to American farmers. Hence we reproduce the following table from an

Although Ireland is famed for potatoes, yet the per acre yield of potatoes in Ireland is only 3.67 tons, against 5.96 tons in England. With improved transportation facilities we may yet largely

D. E. Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry, says: In order to secure a higher consumption of poultry products per capita in the United States, it is of prime importance that there should always be an abundant supply of strictly fresh eggs and of the best grades of table poultry. This condition is also a necessary factor in the development of the export trade. When the markets are filled with eggs that have lost their quality and flavor by long keeping and many of which have acquired an offensive taste; when the broilers and roasters offered to the consumer are thin, tasteless, tough, and altogether unfit for the table, it is not surprising that they are passed by and beef, mutton or pork taken in their stead. So also when the exporter is buying for consignment to foreign markets, he must be able to find at all times a good article of eggs or poultry in sufficient quantity or he cannot continue his trade.

Some gentleman had given him a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil which had done him a lot of good: he only used half the bottle, and remembering that I had been a martyr to rheumatism and sciatica for years, that I had literally tried everything, had doctors, and all without benefit, I became discouraged, and looked upon it that there was no help for me.
