He spent the rest of the day in inspecting the post and riding horseback with Major Pitcher.

The president spent most of his time in studying the habits of the different species of game. He lay for hours near a herd of elk or mountain goats and frequently walked eight or ten miles to observe them. He also studled bird life with Mr. Burroughs and showed himself particularly well posted on the subject. Mr. Burroughs was able to show him but one bird with which he was not acquainted namely.

The president's camp equipment was omposed of two Sibley tents and another tent, with board floors, and while everything was simple it was quite comfortable. The party accompanyg him was a small one, consisting of Major Pitcher, Mr. Burroughs, a couple of orderlies and two cooks. There was also a small force of men to man the pack wagon. An amusing incident occurred during the visit to Gevserland. The president and Mr. Burroughs were on skis racing down the hill. The snow was soft and Mr. Burroughs, who had never used a ski, soon found himself with his head in the snow and his feet in the air. He had hardly struggled to his feet when the president repeated the performance.
