When there was to be an appointment made to the bench at Omaha to fill the vacancy caused by the elevation of Judge Baxter to the office of United States district attorney, the lawyers of the town got together and were in the act of fixing up the matter when the governor had the audacity to fill the office. He did it without the aid or consent of any lawyer on earth, and when they spotted and scattered and resolved it was incumbent for the governor to stand by his own hands and let the law fit. The governor still lives.—Fremont Tribune.

In all the state there is no republican of prominence who will undertake a defense of Mickey's railroad and Standard Oil record.—The Columbus Telegram.

The Mickey "record" is its own defense, the sufficiency of which can be tested only by an attack containing specific charges. Such terms as "railroad tool" and "official outstep of corporations" may be effective in high school oratory for the sake of alliteration, but as weapons of attack on public officials they are worn out from over use. They are a bow and arrow method of attack on an armored car. Find more modern weapons or the "Mickey record" will never discover that it is being attacked.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We regret the following from the Columbus Times of April 16th, in explanation of the merger of that paper with the Columbus Journal:

GOOD BYE.

The Times with its type, fixtures, good will and subscription list has been sold to the Columbus Journal and on and after this issue of the Times will be merged with that publication. The Journal will faithfully fill out all advance paid subscriptions. All advertising accounts due and unpaid will be settled only with the undersigned. To the friends, true and loyal friends of the Times and its editor we reluctantly say—Good Bye. The affliction of continued and increased impaired eyesight since August—constantly aggravated by the necessary use demanded of them in the sole and only reason for disposing of the Times. It was never in a more flourishing condition, and—as the writer has frequently stated—has a better subscription list than any paper in the city or county. This combined with the Journal list gives them a far larger list of subscribers than any newspaper in the city of Columbus, the county of Platte or any adjoining county. The writer has passed thirty-eight of the best years of his life in Columbus, and will continue to remain here. For his success in the journalistic field he returns his sincere thanks to his legion of friends.

Will B. Dale.

By the purchase of the subscription list and the good will of the Times we believe that we have doubled the efficiency of the Journal as an advertising medium and increased its possibilities for influence in the community.

The high character of the Times subscribers, whom it will be our pleasure to supply with the Journal, is the best possible testimony to the ability and influence of Mr. Dale in the community where the greater part of his life has been passed. And to those who have subscribed to the Times out of personal friendship for Mr. Dale, we are glad to say that Mr. Dale has promised to be a frequent contributor to our columns, adding to the Journal the influence of that personality which has been the mainstay of the Times.

We trust that those whose names have been thus added to our list will find the Journal sufficiently to their liking to induce them to become permanent subscribers thereto. Times subscribers whose names are already on the Journal list will receive credit on the Journal subscription list for the amount which has been paid in advance for the Times.

COLUMBIANS.

By F. J. BARNUM.

Another spring like this and we'll reform the Gregorian calendar.

There is nothing like traveling around to give one a taste for being settled.

Many men and women who never saw the inside of a college deserve to be called educated in the same category with the man who masticates his grub with his mouth open; education would have saved both.

It all depends on what you call education. Jim Jeffries has the same right to the title as some university professors. And the preacher who ministers to his wife belongs in the same category with the man who masticates his grub with his mouth open; education would have saved both.

Judge Parker would probably prove to be about such a candidate as Hancock was in 1856—nothing for him, nothing against him. Hancock would prove—the Lord knows what besides, but at least he would prove the extent to which the present old democratic party approve of the detachment of the public press.

This department had the pleasure of taking Dr. Platts out for a nice long drive Sunday afternoon. We had one of the sportiest rigs in town and a very cozy little motor which runs into the eyes of everything on the road. We let the doctor monopolize the reins and he enjoyed the ride very much. He is hoarse and buggy below the doctor.

There is a profane place in Lincoln where daily and nightly congregates a mob for the play of chess. The members thereof are bound together by stand for equality of capital and labor will force the strongest coal barons to walk on the same carpet with the poor coal miner. Nor will they believe in a wider federal control of railroads oppose the President who has done more than any other man to make the railroads subservient to federal law. The fact is, the democratic candidate who can carry the east cannot touch the west, not even Platte county.

One thousand delegates will sit in Democratic national convention. Of these the New York Herald assigns five hundred and forty seven to Judge Parker, and one hundred and sixty nine to Hearst. Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri and one half of Minnesota are conceded to Judge Parker. Rhode Island, Maine, District of Columbia, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Wyoming, Nevada, Utah, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico are granted to Mr. Hearst, while Mississippi, Kentucky, Iowa, Oregon, Washington, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, Missouri and Wisconsin are given as doubtful, with the chances favoring Parker. Since six hundred sixty-six and two-thirds votes will be necessary under the two-thirds rule, the Herald figures are not sufficient to nominate Parker, unless the two-thirds rule is changed by the convention.

The strict enforcement of the anti-trust laws is requiring the Standard Oil company to pay full rates on the railroads for carrying its oil. This is something the concern has not been in the habit of doing, and it does not want to begin at this late date if it can be avoided. To secure independence of the railroads around the great lakes the company is now putting into commission a fleet of half a dozen or more great oil ships. The crude material is sent from the wells in Ohio to the great refinery at Whiting, Ind. From there the refined oil has been sent out by rail but hereafter a large percentage of it will go by water. Each ship will have the carrying capacity of a heavy train-load of oil. As there will be oil ships at all of the lake ports, Mr. Rockefeller will now be able to go around and offer oil shipments to every railroad that reaches the lake region, and it will be practically impossible for the managers to organize to keep up the rates.—State Journal.

Among the Churches.

The ladies' aid society met this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Rothleiner.

John Carrig of Aurora, a postal clerk, nephew of Rev. Munro, visited his uncle and family Sunday.

Hazel From will sing a solo Sunday evening at the Epworth League meeting in the Methodist church.

The discourse of Rev. Munro Sunday evening on "Pippa Passes" was a scholarly interpretation of that beautiful poem of Browning.

The subject of Rev. Munro's sermon next Sunday morning will be "The Sacredness of Secular." Thursday evening a business meeting will be held in the Congregational church.

Frank Blair of Sumner, brother of Mrs. Rev. Munro, visited relatives here and returned home Monday. Mr. Blair was a delegate to the Presbytery which met in Genoa last week.

A conference of the Columbus Deacons of the Catholic church was held yesterday morning in the Catholic monastery. The deacons comprise the churches in Platte county and is represented by 25 priests, all of whom were present at this conference. Bishop Scannell of Omaha and Father O'Donahue of Albion were among those from out of the county. The conference was called to consult about discipline and other church matters.

Rev. Halsey and J. H. Nator went to Council Bluffs Monday to attend the Presbytery which meets there this week. Rev. Halsey is chairman of one of the important committees.

The ladies study circle of the Presbyterian church will meet Friday in the pastor's study. The subject for the afternoon will be the Monasteries in the Early Ages.

Carl T. McKinnie, of Colorado Springs, Colo. will sing a solo Sunday evening in the Methodist church. Mr. McKinnie is bass soloist in one of the best churches in Colorado Springs.

The principal gathering of interest in the Methodist circles is the district conference to be held this week, beginning yesterday and continuing to Thursday morning. The Journal published the entire program last week. This evening Rev. Horn of Grand Island will give an illustrated lecture on the Holy Land. A vocal solo, "The Holy City," will be illustrated by photos thrown upon the canvas. All the sessions at the church are free to the public.

Dr. Propper of Des Moines, Iowa, district secretary of the home missionary society of the Baptist church, addressed an audience in the Baptist church here yesterday.

Sunday morning Rev. Ulmer will give a special address to the children of his church, taking for his subject "Rejected by His Own."

Rev. Wagner, pastor of the German Methodist congregation of Columbus and Dunbar, returned Thursday from a hospital for several weeks. He is again able to resume his regular work.

The Presbyterians, Baptists and Congregational churches will unite in a Sunday conference to be held in the Congregational church April 24th. Prof. H. M. Steidley, field secretary, and Miss Agnew, primary superintendent, of the Nebraska Sunday school association, will conduct the meetings. The following program will be given:

Sunday afternoon, April 24th.—Prayer service, 2:00; Primary and Junior Work, Miss Agnew, 2:30; Teaching Problem, H. M. Steidley, 3:15; Children's meeting, conducted by Miss Agnew, 4:00.

Sunday evening—Song service, 7:30; The Boy God Made, H. M. Steidley; Saving the Children, Miss Agnew. A chorus and Prof. Poole's orchestra will furnish the music.

AGRICULTURE.

For this department the Journal solicits items from Platte county farmers, showing what they are doing and how they do it.

Joseph Hengeler reports a hatch of 190 chicks from one of his 200 egg incubators.

Farmers should not forget that their personal property tax is due December 1, and delinquent February 1, under the new law.

Farmers will note the poultry and egg ads in this paper. Don't buy until you have investigated the products of your own county.

If you want to buy or sell anything on the farm, either write or call up the Journal and ask for a want ad. Advertising pays the farmer as well as the merchant.

Platte county farmers are to be congratulated on the large cash valuation they are turning in to the assessors. Your taxes may be higher this year. But in the end a complete and honest listing of all property at actual value will make the tax uniformly lower for all honest property owners.

If you have an item that you think will interest your neighbor send it to the Journal for the agricultural column. New breeds and large records are always interesting. Call us up by phone if you haven't time to write. This column is for all the farmers of Platte county. It will be what you help to make it.

Leading the list of evergreens for Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, by general consent in the Austrian pine. Take 14 inch trees, twice planted, and take care of them, and they will be sure to live. Black Hills spruce and Colorado blue spruce will do well. Penderosa pine for central and western Nebraska does well.

Shrubs.—There are about twelve kinds of shrubs. I name three in order of flowering. First, Arguta, earliest to bloom and last to hold its foliage, which is rich in autumn tints; next, Van Houti, very hardy and a snow bank of white when in bloom; then Opulifolia. Don't forget Syriacus; most of the twelve kinds do well.

Flowers.—Plant perennials. Mixed Columbinas in masses are very effective. The glorious oriental perennial poppy is a dazzling splendor and very hardy. But chief and queen of all the flowers for beauty, fragrance and hardiness is the modern pansy. Plant early and late ones and have a succession of bloom, which will not disappoint you.

Climbers.—The Crimson Rambler is the most splendid success ever introduced into the state. Never touch the White and Golden Ramblers; they are fronds and worthless. Halocna, Honey suckle, is a perpetual, white blooming, sweet scented climber. Chinese fragrant vine, and the Belgian is the perpetual red bloomer. These are all hardy, while the Jackman and Paeonifolia Climbers are very fine.

The state of Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Oklahoma and South Dakota will have to import 45,000 tons to assist in harvesting the wheat crop this fall, according to members of the western association of free employment bureaus. The organization, which is designed to assist in securing help for the handling of the western wheat crop, has a meeting with representatives from the western states tonight in the association. The west in the demand going to be for harvest hands this year that the association is already hunting for men.

Governor Mickey has set apart Tuesday, April 22, as Arbor Day. The question as to what trees, shrubs and flowers to plant on that day should be carefully considered. The following, quoted from the Nebraska Farmer is suggestive: "Plant your waste wet ground to cottonwood and Cowling poplar. Millions of dollars could be saved to the state by utilizing the waste places, and make trees dig gold out of mud. The Thurlow willow should also be planted on a large scale, as it is the most rapid growing of all trees, and will grow readily from cuttings. Never plant a box elder. Good-bye forever to a thing that starts out to be a tree and turns out to be a pumpkin vine. Besides it is the home of bugs which swarm by the millions all over the land, creeping into every crevice, getting into your beds and into the carpet. We have the grand native tree which looks the least—the elm, ash and honey locust. They seem to endure everything. Then we have the Kentucky coffee tree, the Linden and bird cherry, also native. If you plant these species have Nebraska grown seed."

"UP THE SPOUT."

One Explanation of the Origin of This Suggestive Saying.

"If you are suffering from ennui and want to divert your mind from life's routine I'll give you a panacea," said a young man who has a penchant for deriving too unusual things. "Just pick out some quaint phrase or expression, whether it is a clear cut epigram or a crude colloquialism, and trace it to its source. You will invariably find that these phrases, or 'saws,' as they are called, have a history all their own. And they are usually descriptive of some actual condition. These provincial phrases have enriched the language and have added to its force as well, though some of the provincial phrases are a good stride from the line of correct English. Some days ago several friends were disputing about the origin of these quaint old sayings, and one in particular was used which was famous to every one at the dial of a clock. I refer to 'gone up the spout.' It is applied to almost any failure or misfortune. A firm that falls has 'gone up the spout.' 'A politician who is crushed is 'gone up the spout.' A man will say that if he has not a certain thing he'll 'go up the spout.' Going 'up the spout' is a penalty for every sort of failure. Even if a man is dying his friends will answer inquiries with a sad shake of the head and say that he's 'gone up the spout.' The discussion as to the origin of this phrase or expression has been carried on for the last of his history. A few days later I attended church in this city, and the pastor, who has been occupying a New Orleans pulpit for years, told his congregation how the phrase originated.

"Years ago in England money lenders had private offices for the convenience of a particular class of their customers. A man who has ever gone into a pawnshop, passing under the glint of three gleaming yellow balls, knows what humiliation is secretly felt as he emerges. Many people, in fact, are too timid to enter a pawnshop. It is a matter of pride with them. They do not like to write their name on a check, and the noble papers of England it is a thing they always left to some trusted servant. It was only natural, then, that some means of allowing these high toned borrowers to pawn their jewels without being seen would be invented. The 'spout' was the result. It was a writing desk and a water container. The upstairs never saw his patron. The article was put in the 'spout,' sent up, and the money came back, together with the ticket. That is how the expression 'gone up the spout' started. It can be readily seen how very expressive it is when applied to crushing adversity."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

His Brother's Skull.

It was a rather unusual ornament for a room, if it could be called an ornament, but he looked often have strange things in the room. It was a human skull, polished and made into a receptacle for stray bits of paper or anything else that one wanted to put into it. The top could be removed at pleasure.

It was a gruesome thing to have a writing desk and a water container. A good deal of attention. Callers shuddered as they looked at it, and one day one of them asked the bachelor why he had it around.

"Oh, it's a sort of keepsake," he said, carelessly. "It was my brother's."

"Your brother's?"

"He looked surprised as he saw every one in the room edging away from him.

"Why, yes," he said.

"Do you mean to say that that was your brother's skull?" demanded one of the writers of the matter. "What right?" he asked, with apparent astonishment. "He gave it to me when he was married. He got it when he was a medical student, but his wife would have it around the house."

Missing a Trail.

The ignorance of many people about the habits and capacities of the blind is illustrated by a question which a man once asked Helen Keller. Although he was a scholar and a man of letters, he wanted to know if she was a pupil in one of the earliest institutions for the blind, says Fanny Crosby in her "Life Story," was vastly bored by the foolish questions asked by visitors whom he had to escort about the school.

The climax was reached when he took them to the dining hall.

"Dear me," exclaimed a wondering dame. "How do you blind folks ever manage to see the way to your mouths?"

"Well, ma'am," replied the boy solemnly, "each of us hires one end of a string to his tongue and the other to the leg of his chair. By following that we manage to prevent the victuals losing their way."

The Movement of Odors.

That odors move with the air or pass through it like gases and do not diffuse through it in waves as sounds do or in swiftly moving particles like water waves, has been conclusively proved by experiments on the propagation of scents through small tubes. In such tubes there can be no general motion of the air, and the rate of travel of an odor is extremely slow. That of ammonia took over two hours to get through a tube a yard and a half long. The presence of the ammonia could be detected chemically at about the same time that its smell was noticed. It seemed to make little difference in the speed whether the tube was held horizontally or vertically or whether the odor moved up or down.—Success.

Real Balm of Gilead.

The real balm of Gilead is the dried juice of the low shrub, it is not what is known in Syria. It is very valuable and scarce, for the amount of balm yielded by one shrub never exceeded six drops a day. According to Josephus, the balsam or balm of Gilead was one of the presents given by the queen of Sheba to King Solomon. The Jewish physicians prescribed it evidently for dyspepsia and melancholia.

Birds' Nest on Elephant.

"A" elephant had been a pretty expensive bird's nest.

"Yes; I wish I had enough money to buy one."

"What do you want with an elephant's nest?"

"I don't; I merely expressed a wish for the money."—Philadelphia Press.

A STORY OF CRANES.

Novel Way in Which the South American Utilizes the Bird.

The natives of Venezuela and adjoining countries on the north side of the river Amazon often avail themselves of the services of the native crane to care for their poultry and also use it in the place of a collie or shepherd dog to guard and herd their domestic animals. This remarkable bird, which the Indians call patagani and the ornithologists Paophae craptans, is found in a wild state in great forests that lie between the northern coasts of South America and the Amazon and British Guiana. The birds never leave the forests unless shot or captured.

They travel about in flocks of from 100 to 200 in search of the berries, fruits and insects upon which they subsist. Their usual gait is a slow and stately march, but they enliven themselves from time to time by leaping up in the air, executing eccentric and fancy flights and striking the most absurd and grotesque attitudes. If pursued they endeavor to save themselves by running, for their flight is so weak, according to Schomburgk, that when they attempt to fly over a body of water of any considerable width they are often compelled to drop upon it and save themselves by swimming.

When alarmed they utter the peculiar cry which has obtained for them the name of trumpeter. The sound is something like that produced by a person endeavoring to shout the syllables "tow, tow, tow, tow," with his mouth shut or the doleful note made by children on New Year's day with their trumpets. The yakkams usually deposit their eggs in a hollow in the ground, often at the foot of a tree.

A nest generally contains ten eggs of a pale green color. The young birds follow their mothers and propensities are hatched, but do not lose their pretty down covering until several weeks old. The yakkams are very readily tamed and prove valuable servants to the Indians, who domesticate them, and as they are courageous and will protect animals entrusted to their care at every risk of themselves, they are obliged to yield to their authority.

They may be trusted with the care of a flock of sheep or domestic fowls and every morning will drive the ducks and poultry to their feeding places and, carefully selecting any stragglers, bring them safely home at night.

They are very intelligent and obey the voice of their master, follow him when permitted wherever he goes and appears delighted at receiving his caresses. It pines at his absence and welcomes his return and is extremely jealous of any rival. Should any animal attack its master, the crane is in utmost fury attacks it with wings and beak, driving it away.

It presents itself regularly during meals, from which it chases all domestic animals and even the negroes who wait on the table, if it is not well acquainted with them, and only asks for a share of the eatables if they are driven away all who might aspire to a favorable notice from the family.

Anteater Way to Force Contentment.

In a remote village in Hungary a husband and his wife were found dead, and their man servant, being arrested, confessed the deed, but stated that three brothers—neighbors of the old couple—had persuaded him to murder them and had divided the spoils, something like $500, with him. These three brothers were immediately arrested.

The judge did an unusual thing on the day of the funeral. He brought them in chains to the churchyard, placed them near the open grave and bade the priest in his address to praise the good qualities of the victims and with the startling remark, "And here stand their vile murderers at the grave." This was done, and the judge in the meantime watched the three brothers' faces to see if they looked guilty. This form of examination caused some indignation among the people of the neighborhood.—London News.

Newsman Who Never Takes a Bath.

In Russia and in the Balkan states the baths are, as elsewhere, restricted entirely to the upper classes and may be regarded as a luxury of the rich. The peasant in the Balkan states, on the other hand, is a clean, practical, and he could hardly be expected to bathe in his clothes. He is manifestly of the opinion that if he keeps himself hermetically sealed no dust can possibly get at him, nor can one quite understand how it does happen that the dust does get to him.

Beginning the Day Aright.

You remember perhaps the story of a Greek philosopher who had his boy every morning awakened from sleep by a soft, sweet music. His purpose was that the boy might begin each day with thoughts of beauty and goodness. The idea was admirable. It is a glorious power we have to set the thoughts and feelings of our children for the days. It is no easy matter to start and so hard to get most before we have lost the beauty of three or four hours. It is no light thing to have lived a half day mealy. Then we have to take account of the fact that a great many influences are capable of setting the day badly. The weather affects our boys and girls as it does us, and they are not experienced in a way to give them power by reason to rise over antagonism.

Energy Wasted After Business Hours.

A great many people dissipate more energy between the time when they leave their work at night and when they return to it in the morning than they expend all day in their vocations, though they would be shocked and offended if any one were to tell them so. They think that physical dissipation is the only method of energy expending. But men and women of exemplary moral habits dissipate their vitality in a hundred ways. They indulge in wrong thinking; they worry; they fret; they fear this, that and the other imaginary thing, and they carry their business home with them, and work as hard mentally after business hours as during them.—Orison Sweet Marden in Success.

The Portuguese Rehearsal.

A dish as much eaten by the Portuguese as mince pie by Americans is the rehearsal. It is of Moorish origin and is easily and quickly prepared—so bedded the habits of a domestic race. Thick slices of bread are soaked in new milk, fried in olive oil and then spread with honey and eaten hot. The result is something delicious, and those who have once tasted the rehearsal will want to taste it again.

HE WANTS A FARM.

We have a customer anxious to buy a farm of 120 or 160 acres close to Columbus. He will allow the present owner to retain possession this year. It must be good land, fairly well improved.

HULST'S PHARMACY.

Has just received a new stock of Fine Wall Paper

We invite the public to look the line over before buying.

Regers' Stainfloor Finish.

Hold in all shades, is unexcelled by any paint or other stain. A registered pharmacist will compound all prescriptions. Call on me.
