STAINED GLASS WORK

Changed Much In Centuries. The twentieth century American stained glass maker follows without important variation the simple methods of the French monk of eight centuries ago. The first requisite is the design. The artist makes a small water color sketch to show the general ing it with detailed studies. From this two large drawings or cartoons are made, the exact size of the desired window. One cartoon shows where the leads will be placed-the thin strips of lead, hollowed on both sides and looking in a transverse section like the letter H, which form the framework to bind the pieces of glass together. Another drawing gives the size and shape of each piece of glass. This cartoon is cut into its component pieces by a pair (or triplet) of three bladed scissors, which leave between their parallel blades a space sufficient for the leads. These cut out patterns are put together again on a large glass easel. to which they are attached by wax, and the spaces between are blacked in to give the effect of the leads.

The easel is then placed against a window where the light can stream through it. The artist or his substitute replaces each paper pattern on the easel by a piece of glass of exactly the same size, cut from a sheet of glass of the color called for by the color sketch. The sketch is not followed exactly: experiment with the actual glass will suggest improvements. To a greater or less extent this stained glass is supplemented by painted glass, on which the colors are fired as in china painting. When all the pieces have been cut they are transferred to the "leading" drawing, the flexible leads are twisted into shape and soldered at the joints and a special cement applied to make the whole water tight. The window is now complete, ready to be put in position, where it is made secure by copper wires fastened to the transverse bars of iron.-Bcoklovers' Maga-

"The longer I live," observed the cashier of a bank downtown, "the more I realize the importance of little things. Here is a case in point," he continued, referring to a letter be just had received. "A few weeks ago I had two callers in my office, one an excitable elderly mar, a big depositor, and the other the president of a manufacturing concern and the writer of this letter. This manufacturer left, and soon afterward the excitable man discovered that some one had taken his hat. He stormed about the place until one of the clerks suggested that perhaps the manufacturer had taken it by mistake. The excitable man demanded his address and started out to hunt him down and give him 'a piece of his mind.' "The other day I read a letter from the manufacturing concern and was astonished to see among the names of expression on her daughter's face. | called for his hat that his anger cooled at once. Then he got to talking about the manufacturer's business and the money he was making. A few days later he invested heavily in the concern and was elected its vice president.

And all because of that little mistake

New Year's In Tibet.

Feb. 18 is New Year's day in Tibet. and for the succeeding three weeks Lassa is the scene of strange proceedings. Its government passes from the lama to a monk of the Debang monastery, who buys the right of rule by auction. He is called the taluo and, receiving the homage of all, exercises his A pint of it will enable a fatigued per- authority by imposing heavy fines for his own profit. His men visit every bouse in Lassa to collect heavy taxes and fines, so that all the poorer people leave the city at the New Year. From the country round priests flock in for numerous religious ceremonies, which culminate in the selection of a human scapegoat for the sins of Lassa. The face of the victim is mainted half black though they be but momentary feel-ings, will distort and destroy for the beaten by the populare as a symbol
