Grocers in the city say they have been unable to supply the demand for fruit jars this season. All the merchants have been out of that article at some time during the summer, and the wholesale stores have been unable to supply the demand. The same condition exists all through the middle states, owing to the abundant crop of all kinds of fruit. The large amount of fruit being canned created extra demands for sugar, spices vinegar etc., much bevond the supply laid in by the merchants.

E. Corbin, the Union Pacific florister is in town today. He says he took a ride of thirty-five miles in the country near Grand Island Sunday and upon thorough examination he found at least 90 per cent of the corn out of danger of frost, and he thinks in ten days the corn will all be out of danger. He says the corn near Columbus is even farther advanced than farther west. Mr. Corbin is on his way to Genoa where he will lay out two parks for the railroad company similar to those in Columbus. He has been employed by the Union Pacific people since '73.

J. W. Wisenstine returned Monday night from a two weeks' visit with his brother and sister in eastern Ohio, whom he had not seen for forty-one years when they were children together. Mr. Wisenstine stopped over one day in Chicago and spent three days at St. Louis on his return. He says that the rich Ohio farms of his childhood have been replaced by coal mines that have changed the character of the population till his birth-place has no more attractions for him. Mr. Wisenstine pronounces the St. Louis fair an expensive luxury. He say that it costs a man a quarter every time he turns around and if he looks back it costs him fifty cents.
