The Journal piano concert at Gray's last Saturday afternoon attracted a large crowd. And those who came were treated not only to some very fine music on a very fine piano but were also treated to some very delicious hot coffee served by Gray's. The Journal never does things by halves, neither does the Gray Mercantile Company. These Saturday concerts are a regular thing, they will be made different and better each week. If you haven't attended one yet, it is high time you did. Don't forget to be on hand next Saturday and after you hear the Journal piano, subscribe for the Journal and give your friend the beautiful piano. Maybe, incidentally, the Grays will treat you right. It may not always be the coffee, but it will be something.

Poultry Show.
The last day of the show was a busy day for the owners of the birds and the officers of the association. Every body was busy taking their birds home and all seemed pleased with the result of the exhibition. One of the pets of the show was the Gray African goose owned by George Khoderhorst, son of Henry Rhodehorst. The large bird which is not yet full grown has been trained to make a motion which appears very much like a bow. The pet stands about one and one half feet high.
There were 600 entries made this year, about three times as many as were exhibited last year. The Judge C. H. Khodes from Topeka, Kansas says the Columbus show is the largest he has judged this year and contains the best exhibit of white birds he has ever judged.
Mrs. Will Swartzley has on exhibition a handsome wreath made entirely from the feathers of chickens in their own coops. The feathers are shaped and fastened in forms of flowers and are beautifully arranged.
Miss Anna Bomter has given a hand made robe pillow in as one of the prizes, which has a pen stock of a farm yard scene, upon white linen. J. K. Palmer is one of the happiest men among the exhibitors. He has a Rhode Island red rooster which the judge pronounced as near perfect as any bird could be.
