Captain Harry Lehr lost his home last night. We mean his old home, where pa and ma lives. He came in on his run late last evening on the Spalding branch and as usual after train work was through went home.

The old place where Harry had in his boyish days played marbles and mumble-jug was deserted, no mother greeted him at the door, nor was there others of the family to say "hello, Harry is that you?" It happened that Harry forgot that the family had moved into new quarters in the north part of town the same day and before he thought of the change he traced the same steps of years before. He admitted to a Journal reporter that he was lost and said it seemed strange that after seventeen years of living in one place in our city that feeling should catch him now. He found his new home all right and the soft pillow was in its proper place when he found himself ready for rest.

There was no evidence of gold bricks or corn cure so we suppose the stranger felt just as comfortable under the lid as a country editor does when a delinquent subscriber pays up.

Al Giger, the drayman, made a forced trip up Washington avenue Friday that would make some of our automobilists look like ten cents had they seen it. The horse Al was driving got frisky and started without the driver's consent and continued for several blocks. The B. & M. train happened to be out of the road just as the horse struck the crossing. Gloves

These are cool silk gloves of fine quality and perfect in fit and workmanship. Every detail of the finishing is beautifully done. But the special feature which distinguishes them from all other silk gloves is that they have double woven finger tips, which insures the double wear and yet does not make the finger ends bulky as is the case with ordinary silk gloves which have an extra piece sewed in. A guarantee ticket with every pair of "Tasma" Gloves—a guarantee which will be redeemed with a new pair of gloves in case the finger tips wear out before the rest of the glove does.

Violet Wickerwork.

The year's preference for things in the shades of purple and violet is being extended even to the furniture, and the delicate shades of violet in wickerwork will be welcomed by those people who have long admired their walls with papers in violet designs, says a Boston Herald correspondent. I am not sure that one would not get tired of it, and it is a very trying color with which to surround oneself, but there is everything in knowing that you can satisfy your desire if you want to, and the purple room may become a thing pointed out by fashion as eminently desirable.

Our Digestive Apparatus.

If men were designed to live on one particular standard diet, such as each food faddist thinks he has discovered, they would have a simple, straightforward digestive apparatus, calculated to deal with such a diet without undue complexity or "overlapping." On the contrary, our digestive apparatus is like our teeth, characteristically omnivorous. Pepsi is only one of at least a dozen different ferments, some of which can only act in alkaline medium, others only in an acid medium, others only in the presence of such and such a body, others only in its absence. This extraordinary, complex apparatus was not constructed to provide problems for physiologists or to consume superfluous vital energy. Its plain meaning, if people were on the lookout for meaning—is that the more complex, adaptable and varied the apparatus the fitter is its owner to survive in all ditto emergencies. —Fall Mail Gazette.
