Happiness. Happiness is the end of every man's philosophy, whether he be a philosopher of the fields and shops. But the question is, "What is happiness?" "What constitutes it?" Most of what we thought was happiness had the bitter of selfishness, but when our happiness consists in making others happy and helping them in their hour of need, there are no dregs in the cup we drink. And if there were, we would never know it, for this cup of joy is always full, and further, as long as we live there will be those who need our help, and consequently we cannot exhaust the contents of this cup.

Wild Pigeons Excite Comment. Rant H. Hewitt of Wethersfield sock flying over the town Sunday a flock of fourteen old-fashioned wild pigeons. This variety has not been seen in this section before for twenty years. Thirty or forty years ago they were very plentiful hereabouts. Sportsmen who heard Mr. Hewitt tell about the flock are considerably stirred up and wonder if the pigeons will return here after an absence of so many years.—Hartford Courant.

When a girl is in love she thinks she is the happiest thing on earth. Pity she hasn't sense enough to stay there! But some people never know when they are well off.

Could Get No Rest. Freeborn, Minn., Sept. 18th (Special)—Mr. R. E. Goward, a well-known man here is rejoicing in the relief from suffering he has obtained through using Dodd's Kidney Pills. His experience is well worth repeating, as it should point the road to health to many another in a similar condition.

"I had an aggravating case of Kidney Trouble," says Mr. Goward, "that gave me no rest day or night but using a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills put new life in me and I feel like a new man."

"I am happy to state I have received great and wonderful benefit from Dodd's Kidney Pills. I would heartily recommend all sufferers from Kidney Trouble to give Dodd's Kidney Pills a fair trial as I have every reason to believe it would never be regretted."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make you feel like a new man or woman because they cure the kidneys. Cured kidneys mean pure blood and pure blood means bounding health and energy in every part of the body.

A Sweet Voice. The loud voice, the boisterous laugh, the noisy behavior, emanating from the pretty, tastefully dressed woman, are unmistakable evidence of an inner vulgarity, unsuspected were she merely judged by her appearance. Insincerity, too is nearly always betrayed by the voice. It even more than the eyes, is the interpreter of the heart. The face may deceive the observer by its masque, but the voice rarely. If the speaker lack sincerity, heart good-will, though the words be fair and all that is correct, there is that in the voice that betrays the lack, some flatness or unresponsiveness that "reverses the hollowness."

It is not the physical defect in the voice—for this, though regrettable, is not the fault of the possessor—that mar; it is, so much as the lack of the moral quality, if one may be permitted the expression.

Coin for the Bride. In Holland when a girl is betrothed, it is the custom to place a money box, often in the form of a china pig, which must be broken before its contents can be taken out, on the hall table, or some other conspicuous place, and every one who calls is expected to drop a coin into it, which goes to help in furnishing the young couple's house. If the sum put in is a large one, a paper is generally attached to it with the name of the giver written on it. It is really a more sensible arrangement than that by which a mass of often useless presents is bestowed on a bride.

Woman's chief foolishness consists in not demanding a higher standard in the man of her choice.

HONEST PHYSICIAN. Works with Himself First. It is a mistake to assume that physicians are always skeptical as to the curative properties of anything else than drugs.

Indeed, the best doctors are those who seek to heal with as little use of drugs as possible and by the use of correct food and drink. A physician writes from Calif. to tell how he made a well man of himself with Nature's remedy:

"Before I came from Europe, where I was born," he says, "it was my custom to take coffee with milk (cane latte) with my morning meal, a small cup (cane noir) after my dinner and two or three additional small cups at my club during the evening.

"In time nervous symptoms developed, with pains in the cardiac region, and accompanied by great depression of spirits, despondency—in brief, 'the blues!' I at first tried medicines, but got no relief and at last realized that all my troubles were caused by coffee. I thereupon quit its use forthwith, substituting English Breakfast Tea.

"The tea seemed to help me at first, but in time the old distressing symptoms returned, and I quit it also, and tried to use milk for my table beverage. This I was compelled however to abandon speedily, for, while it relieved the nervousness somewhat, it brought on constipation. Then by a happy inspiration I was led to try the Postum Food Coffee. This was some months ago and I still use it. I am no longer nervous, nor do I suffer from the pains about the heart, while my 'blues' have left me and life is bright to me once more. I know that leaving off coffee and using Postum healed me, and I make it a rule to advise my patients to use it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE NEWS IN NEBRASKA.

STATE FAIR MADE MONEY. OVER THE STATE.

Board Will Have Balance of $12,000 to $14,000.

With a balance of $12,000 to $14,000 in the treasury when they were expecting not more than $6,000 or $7,000, the members of the board of managers of the state fair are feeling unusually jubilant. The board held its usual meeting for the allowance of claims and after all those which have been presented were paid the balance sheet showed there was $14,758.67 remaining. This will be reduced somewhat by belated bills and in order to allow for all possible items the foregoing general estimate has been made.

The members who were present at the meeting were almost incredible when Secretary Bassett announced the result of his figuring. Chairman Rudge shook his head and insisted on going over the figures again. After the members had been convinced of the correctness of the figures a broad smile spread over their features. Immediately after the close of the fair it was estimated that the balance would be between $5,000 and $7,000. The following statement shows the receipts and expenditures of the fair:

Table with columns for Receipts and Expenditures. Receipts include On hand, January 1, 1905; General Admission; Amphitheatre; Quarter Street; Concessions; Stalls and Pens; Speed Entries; Camping Permit; Miscellaneous Sources; State Appropriation; Railway Coupons. Expenditures include Warrants to Sent; Premiums including Speed; Claims audited and allowed; Balance.

This is said to be the best showing ever made by the board at the close of the fair. It is more remarkable as some of the members of the board had spent considerable time on the two rainy days figuring the amount of the deficit and wondering how they could raise money enough to pay out. At the beginning of the fair the board was just about even with the world in all departments. Because of the fact that there was no balance in the treasury the members of the board were fearful of a deficit.

STATE OF NEBRASKA WINS ONCE MORE

The state of Nebraska has again won a victory in the interior department in the matter of the Boyd county lands which have been claimed by squatters. The state has now won repeated victories in the department of the interior and one decisive victory in the state courts, after repeated attempts by the squatters to secure title through the legislature and the state board of educational lands and funds. A former board, or the majority of it, including Attorney General Prout and Secretary of State Marsh, once voted to deed the land to the squatters, but Land Commissioner Follmer declined to attach his signature and as a result the property was saved to the state.

Land Commissioner H. M. Eaton has received notice of a ruling on the last appeal case taken by the squatters to the department of the interior. The appeal was filed there by G. W. McCright. The point raised by McCright was that a former state land commissioner had made a choice of lieu lands in Cherry county and that the state laid claim to the land he occupies subsequent to the date of the settlement thereon by him now holds that the state had the right to make its choice of the lands set apart for that purpose and that the prior occupation of the land by McCright did not defeat that right.

TRIES TO EXTERMINATE FAMILY. Drink-Crazed Man Assaults Wife and Children. BEATRICE—Crazed from drink Harm Huls, a German living about two miles north of town, knocked his wife down with a club and dragged her about the yard by the hair of the head. He then attempted to kill his five children. The older ones escaped, but he struck his 18-month-old child over the head, injuring it seriously. Two men happened to be passing the Huls place when the crazed man was engaged in his brutal work and prevented his from making a further attack. He was arrested.

Adjudged a Dipsomaniac. YORK—Ora Tucker, who has been a prominent figure upon the streets of this city for the past year, was taken before the board of insanity and found by them to be a dipsomaniac, and was taken to the asylum for treatment.

A Joke That May Cost Life. NORFOLK—Harry Curtis, a farm hand near Elgin, lies near death, one side paralyzed, his skull fractured and his scalp gashed, as the result of too much joking. His physicians give no hope for Curtis' recovery. Curtis was at bat when the pitcher delivered a ball which struck Shumard on the left jaw, badly fracturing it and rendering him unconscious for a short time. He was taken to Beatrice for treatment.

Kills Two Horses and Tow Mules. PLATTSBROUGH—During a heavy electrical storm which passed over this portion of Cass county the lightning struck and killed two horses and two mules for Joe Tubbs, who resides about one-half mile west of Mynard.

Grand Jury for Polk. OSCEOLA—The first grand jury for Polk county called for a number of years was ordered by Judge B. F. Good. It will convene about the 1st of October.

Word received by Schuyler parties states that the Thirtieth infantry, United States regulars, who will make a practice march through the state, will go into camp there for two days this month.

Phelan & Shirley of Omaha, it is reported, have been awarded contracts for excavating three divisions of the thirty-four-mile government irrigation canal at Glendive, Mont., at a contract price of about $357,000.

A conference of German Lutheran ministers was held at the church southeast of Tecumseh last week. Nearly 100 ministers from over the state were in attendance and the sessions were filled with interest.

The jury in the Haddix-Butler case brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree at Broken Bow. Sentence will not be passed until Attorney Sullivan of the defense has presented arguments for a new trial.

Peter Barber, a single man, who had worked on the farm of John Burger, seven miles north of Auburn, for some months, committed suicide. He was of an emotional nature and frequently threatened to put an end to his existence.

Much new lumber is being sold at Wood River every day and taken into the country, where the farmers are building granaries, barns and residences. This has been the busiest building season ever known in that part of the state.

The $7,000 city hall refunding bonds of West Point have been sold to the Bankers Reserve Life Insurance company of Omaha at a premium of $112.70. The bid of this company was the highest received. The new bonds bear interest at 4 1/2 per cent.

Governor Mickey honored a requisition for the return to Adair county, Missouri, of J. N. Hatfield, wanted for forging a note. Hatfield is in jail at McCook and Sheriff Curry of Adair county went there for him as soon as the requisition was honored.

Washington dispatch: Fifty-five men, under command of First Lieutenant Laurence P. Butler of the signal corps, with camp equipment, have left by the Pennsylvania and Rock Island for Fort Omaha. This is the beginning of the big post, as it is known in army affairs, for the signal corps.

Michael Caultley, for thirty-nine years a resident of Fremont, was fatally gored by a vicious cow and died a few minutes later from his injuries.

Mr. Caultley, who is 80 years old, was standing his cow out to pasture near the round house and passed a cow staked out which belonged to Amos Christensen. The Christensen cow attacked him, tossed him several times on her horns, and trampled him.

Ralph Clair, a young section hand on the Northwestern lies at the point of death at Winnetoon, as the result of the wheels of a handcar running over his head, splitting the skull wide open. When the car passed over Clair's head it was derailed and upset and the four other men riding on it were thrown into a ditch. The car was rolling rapidly down a grade when Clair slipped and fell forward, striking the rails.

John Rankin of Fremont, a teamster, fell off a load of coal and sustained injuries which will probably result fatally. He was coming up the street when the axle broke, dropping the rear end of the wagon nearly to the pavement. Rankin was thrown from his seat to the pavement, striking on his face, and taken up unconscious and carried to the hospital.

The town of Nehling, eight miles south of Oakland, on the Great Northern railroad, has been laid out and contains ninety-nine lots. Material is on the ground and work will be commenced at once on the building to be occupied by the bank, already incorporated.

Paris Shumard was seriously injured while playing ball at Hoag. He was at bat when the pitcher delivered a ball which struck Shumard on the left jaw, badly fracturing it and rendering him unconscious for a short time. He was taken to Beatrice for treatment.

With his left hand completely severed under the keen edge of a plow his whole body bruised from tip to toe, and internally injured, the 10 year old son of Jacob Brunneimer near Butte, may die as the result of a runaway accident in the field.

A local company has been formed at Louisville, with H. E. Fankonin president and William Thomas secretary, for the purpose of prospecting for coal, strong evidence of which has been found on the farms of Amos Kieser and George Jackman, three miles west of town. Work will begin at once.

Effect of Locomotives on Careless Hogs

How Right-of-Way Man Won at Dobby's Crossroads—Putting a Different Light on Things—Col. Bender's Scheme.

Col. Bender was trying to get a railroad across a certain southern state and he found a great deal of opposition to it at Dobby's Crossroads. He went up there to speak and he went on to tell the audience how much they would be benefited by the line, and all that, but his remarks were coldly received. When he had finished speaking the man who evidently controlled the situation came to him and said:

"Kurnel, I'm sorry, but I can't agree with you about that railroad. I've heard that they was great hands to kill hawks."

"Yes, they do kill off a few hawks, I believe," admitted the colonel, "but those are always promptly paid for, and then there are other offsets."

"Some you didn't speak about?" "Yes, there will be a depot here at the Crossroads."

"Wall!" "The only loading place any of you fellows have got now is the store, and you've shown up there so often that the interest is all gone. There'll be a dozen trains a day over my road. You can load down to each and every one and stand there on one leg, with your hands in your pockets and a chew of tobacco in your mouth, and all the passengers are going to look out of the window and say to each other:

"That's him—that's Tom Coxon, who run his mewl agin' Joe Batterson's hoss and beat him two lengths in half a mile."

"That's what they are going to say, Tom, and you'll be proudly standing there and taking it all in and knowing you are a bigger man than the president of the United States. That is, it would have happened if you critters hadn't got down on my railroad and decided to vote agin' it."

"Say, kurnel," replied Tom, after a little thought, "I'm glad I came to you. I'm glad you explained matters. You've had put a different light on things and you go ahead with your old bulgine and I'll have a talk with the boys and see that every human one of 'em votes for the bonds. What we all want is a new loafin' place and what I want is to hear somebody sayin' that I'm standin' up on a pinnacle and bound to climb higher if the durned limb don't break."

"And the landlord wiped the bar with a rag furiously."

"It was now the second lineman's turn to treat, and he ordered two glasses of weiss beer. Then his companion nudged him and handed him secretly the twenty-dollar bill. With a grave face he laid it on the bar.

"What's this for?" said the landlord, in a terrible voice.

"The weiss beer, Joe," said the lineman, gently.

"The landlord snatched up the note and jerked his coat from a nail.

"Tend store till I come back," he said to an aged man seated by the window, and he rushed forth.

"The linemen drank their weiss beer in silence. As they finished it the landlord returned. He placed $17.20 in change on the bar.

"How's this?" said the lineman. "This ain't right."

"Sure," said the landlord. "Shure it is, Hank. Ten cents for the weiss and two seventy what you owed me from last month."

Diplomacy Should Be Devoid of Trickery

Nations Fare Best When Dealing Openly and With No Utterior Motive—Story That Emanates from Portsmouth, N. H.

Admiral Mead, at a dinner in Portsmouth, N. H., praised frankness in international relations.

"The nations that are honorable and open with one another, like man to man," he said, "get along best. For in diplomacy, as in every-day affairs, trickery is only met with trickery, and ill feeling is the inevitable result."

He smiled.

"It is like the two linemen," he said, "who tried to best the tavern-keeper."

"These two men, meeting on a hot afternoon in a street that blazed with August sunshine, agreed to retire to the cool blue gloom of a neighboring tavern for a—whiff.

The entered the tavern, and each drank a ginger ale. Then, smiling to himself, the first lineman laid on the bar a twenty-dollar note.

"Just take it out o' that," he said. "The tavern-keeper frowned.

"Nothin' smaller," he asked.

Gen. Fitzhugh Lee Tells an Irish Story

An Apology and an Explanation—Thought Mr. Fitzhugh Was a Man He Once Knew as a Rascal—The Awakening.

One of the last times that the late Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was in New York he related the following at a private dinner. He regarded it, he said, as the most amusing incident of his varied career. He called it "an Irishman's apology."

"I was waiting at the depot at Charlotte, N. C., one afternoon some years ago for a train to Richmond," he said. "It was behind time, and not caring to go back to the hotel I lighted a cigar and paced up and down the long platform. Among the waiting passengers a diminutive Irishman, with trousers touching the tops of his shoes, a cutaway coat six inches too long, and a little old billycock hat, particularly attracted my attention.

He was an unusual character, with the style of whiskers known to the lads in the army as 'sluggers.'

"When I first saw him he was pacing up and down the platform with his head bent slightly forward, eyeing

"Nope," said the lineman, "nothin'."

"Then you'll have to pay me another time."

"And the landlord wiped the bar with a rag furiously."

"It was now the second lineman's turn to treat, and he ordered two glasses of weiss beer. Then his companion nudged him and handed him secretly the twenty-dollar bill. With a grave face he laid it on the bar.

"What's this for?" said the landlord, in a terrible voice.

"The weiss beer, Joe," said the lineman, gently.

"The landlord snatched up the note and jerked his coat from a nail.

"Tend store till I come back," he said to an aged man seated by the window, and he rushed forth.

"The linemen drank their weiss beer in silence. As they finished it the landlord returned. He placed $17.20 in change on the bar.

"How's this?" said the lineman. "This ain't right."

"Sure," said the landlord. "Shure it is, Hank. Ten cents for the weiss and two seventy what you owed me from last month."

Sorcerers Are Exciting the Chinese

So-Called Witches Play Upon the Superstitions of the People—Recalls Boxer Incident of Ignorance.

Says the Pekin and Tientsin Times: "Sorcerers and witches are at present preying on the superstitions of the native population of Chefu. The imposters are practicing a rather unwise method of securing a little gain while at the same time making their victims believe the latter are 'solid' with the gods, to say nothing of escaping a calamity which is only imaginary.

They have issued a tract which is being widely distributed. It begins by stating that Chang Tien Shi (the Buddhist ruler of heaven and earth) entered Pekin in the second moon of this year (March). He made known that nearly all the people of the country would die. On the fifteenth day of the seventh moon (Aug. 15) many demons and spirits would go about walling and crying because of the Ch'oukin pestilence (a disease of which the main symptom is convulsions), which was about to come on the people.

"Those who see the tract should take heed. If the reader makes one copy of it he can escape this calamity; if he makes ten copies and distributes them he will save his family; twenty copies will keep the pestilence from his village; but if he fails to make even one copy and publish it he will surely die of hemorrhage. A good way to prevent or cure the pestilence is to make use of certain prescription. A number of ingredients are then given, of which orange peel and ginseng are the main ones. These ingredients are usually kept and sold by those practicing sorcery or witchcraft.

"As the people are very superstitious the statements of the tract are readily believed and followed. It is reported that there isn't a native family in Chefu that hasn't received a copy and the prescription is being widely made use of; so somebody must be reaping a harvest. This may all seem amusing, but there is another phase to the matter. During the Boxer troubles similar tracts and rumors were a life among the people and caused a great deal of excitement."

How a Wise Maine Man Got Out of It

Trouble Enveloped Him but He Was Quick to Hoodwink a Surprised and Startled Game Warden—A Bluff Made.

There are several ways to get out of trouble. One is to bluff your way through it. This was the method taken once by a man who might have belonged to the Maine legislature, or might not. We won't say either, but will infer that he was a Maine official of some sort.

Everybody knows that Maine has a "short lobster" law, and with the perversity of human nature, the Maine man was very fond of short lobsters. It happened that one day when he was returning from a seashore town he bestowed himself of the family's needs, and "inocg." purchased a fine lot of "shorts" from a fisherman who "needed the money."

Lades with a basket of very lively young lobsters, he boarded a train up, which happened to be one of the game warden's. Within a mile of the lobster owner's destination one of the shellfish escaped from the basket and crawled up the aisle. The game warden dropped his whistle and was ready for business in an instant. As the train slowed up the warden had his man. With visions of a fine of so many "plunks" a lobster, the official gasped. Clearly, something must be done. He resolved to identify himself.

"Do you know who I am?" he thundered, and was about to give his name; then, realizing this would complicate matters, he shouted:

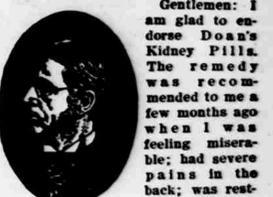

"In the Hon. John Jimson Johnson of the international fish hatcheries commission, and I'm taking these lobster eggs up to Sebago lake to stock the pond.

And, before the train had on full headway again, he stepped off, and it was not until another ten miles had passed that the puzzled warden really made up his mind what a chump he'd been.

U. S. SENATOR TOWNE

Credits Doan's Kidney Pills with a Gratifying Cure.

Hon. Charles A. Towne, ex-U. S. Senator from Minnesota, brilliant orator, clever business man, brainy lawyer, whose national prominence made him a formidable candidate for the presidential nomination in 1904, writes us the following:

Gentlemen: I am glad to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills. The remedy was recommended to me a few months ago when I was feeling miserable; had severe pains in the back; was restless and languid; had a dull headache and neuralgic pains in the limbs and was otherwise distressed. A few boxes of the pills effectually routed my ailment and I am glad to acknowledge the benefit I derived.
