Fight on Train.

The Browning boys had a mix-up on train No. 6, with the train crew and passengers Thursday afternoon in which they drew some ugly wounds and 30 days in jail and $25 fine. Several of the passengers who got in the way, had to go to the hospital when they reached Omaha. The fireman who floored the larger Browning and knocked him through a glass door was Palmatter, the man who several weeks ago threw acid in his wife's face because of her infidelity. The following from the Schuyler Quill gives the details of the mix-up:

Henry and Bert Browning two, colored men of Columbus, formerly of this place were roughly handled by an indignant crowd of passengers on the Union Pacific train No. 6 yesterday afternoon. They boarded the train at Columbus somewhat under the influence of liquor. According to Conductor Tom Horan, who was in charge of the train, he asked them for tickets when one of them handed him a piece of paper remarking that was all the ticket he would get and invited him to put them off. Then without any warning one of them grabbed him while the other hit him in the face. At this the passengers came to the rescue and a free fight ensued in which canes, umbrellas and every available weapon was used. The Brownings were badly bruised on the head and Conductor Horan sustained a scalp wound and several bruises over the eye. When the train stopped here Henry Browning broke away from the fellow holding him and started up street towards the Schuyler House with a crowd at his heels but was soon captured. Deputy Sheriff VanHousen happened near there and both of the negroes were turned over to him and were lodged in the county jail. Several of the passengers were cut and bruised and all of them thoroughly aroused. The Brownings claim that they bought tickets for Omaha and that one of them gave the conductor his ticket but the other could not find his where upon the conductor took hold of him and ordered him to get off of the train. A passenger sitting across the aisle from the Brownings substantiated Conductor Horan's story. Sheriff Carrig of Platte county came down this morning after the Brownings as the scrap occurred while the train was still in Platte county."

Lesson on Temperance.

Ed. Powers has been chief actor since last Friday in a temperance drama which was a striking lesson for those who feel they can win out in a fight against booze.

Powers who has been a peaceable employee of the Union Pacific for five years, most of the time as coal heaver, went on a drunk Thursday and Friday. On Friday afternoon while in Smagacz saloon on Eleventh street he challenged the proprietor to a wrestling match and lost out. Then he got a gun and threatened Smagacz life. He was crazy drunk and was taken to jail by the police. Soon after his incarceration he began to scream like a lunatic and Joe Soriczek, assistant city engineer, who was working near the jail summoned the police again. When the officers arrived, Powers had torn all his clothing off and was fighting "snakes."

The city physician Dr. Platz was called and he gave Powers a hypodermic injection to quiet him.

As soon as Powers was able, he was taken before Judge O'Brien and fined one dollar and costs for carrying concealed weapons.

On Monday he was brought before Judge Batterman on complaint of Felix Smagacz who demanded that he give bond to keep the peace. A large array of witnesses was summoned on both sides. Powers was released.

And all this trouble and public expense because Powers didn't know when to stop.
