Many News

From files of Journal, Dec. 18, 1902.

The condition of the roads and fine weather makes business lively in Columbus.

Mr. Frank Simmes, engaged with Turner & Hult, started east on Monday to visit the home of his childhood in old Maryland.

Jno. Routsan, esq., who has lately been in Sherman county, speaks well of that country. He saw, among other curiosities, four pine trees.

James E. North, esq., met with a loss of property yesterday morning—the dwelling house on his farm near Barnum's burning to the ground. The weather was very calm, and the column of smoke and flame could be readily seen from town, shooting straight toward the heavens. The fire was witnessed from town for half an hour or more, but seen too late to render any assistance. We have been told that the fire originated in the chimney.

A northern railroad to Columbus is again talked of. Let us provide part of the means to build it. Railroad connection with a southern market, and the lumber regions of the north, are two things which Columbus needs. A little means and a strong united effort on the part of our citizens will bring them.

We learn from H. J. Hudson, esq., our accommodating clerk, that the adjourned term of the district court of Platte county, will, by arrangement with the district judge, be held on the second Tuesday of Feb., 1873, at 11 o'clock a. m.

Branigan's Horse Sale.

One of the greatest horse sales ever conducted in the state was held at Columbus last Saturday at Tom Branigan's sale barn.

Over five hundred stock men from all parts of the state attended, all coming with pockets filled with money to either buy or sell,—and they all got action on their judgment of good horse flesh when the animal was led out on the block.

An even one hundred and sixty-five head of horses were sold, among the number being a few head of mules. The sale opened promptly at 12:30, and from that time on it reminded one of being in the "pit" on the Chicago board of trade. The animals went fast, every buyer had his animal picked out, and when his favorite came forth, it was only a bid or two and the writing out of a check.

Among the many horse buyers present were men from New Jersey, Oklahoma, Kansas City, St. Louis, Iowa, Minnesota, Omaha, and many other surrounding towns. The top prices per span ranged from $350, $400 and $555, while many lighter weights demanded $175 to $250. In all the sale was far ahead of expectations, and those who attended praise Tom Branigan for the manner in which he and his help managed the sale, and the carefulness and attention given to the safety and comfort of the horses cared for in his barn.

The result of this sale has been the means of inducing Branigan to conduct a series of similar stock offerings, the next to be held on Friday, February 1, and every three weeks thereafter during the season.

Since Branigan took hold of the stock business here, he has caused all eyes of stockmen to be turned toward Columbus, and every sale following he promises still greater things. Be sure and post the date of the coming sale in your hat, and if you have not attended the late offerings, make it a point to be here and see what a great stock center and market Columbus has got to be.

It is seldom that one hears such "cello work" as that done by Mr. Hugh Barbour in Hoff's Cavatina and the Intermesso from "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni—such beauty of tone and perfect intonation, with a flowing legato, which was yet clear cut and vibrant with emotion. Mr. Barbour was most enthusiastically received.—Des Moines Mail and Times. At High School Gymnasium, Monday evening, Jan. 21.

What cupid's pranks will do no one knows. The following taken from the Silver Creek Sand, explains about an eloping couple from that place: A mild sensation was caused Wednesday by the elopement of Fred Davis and Pearl Kiesel, two well known young people. Rumors are flying thick and out of the bunch we gather that Wednesday morning when young Miss Kiesel came in to school, she was met by Fred Davis with a rig from Shank's livery barn, drove to Columbus and were married at the county judge's office there. They then took the train, ostensibly headed for Centerville, Iowa, where young Davis' mother lives. Their disappearance was only discovered when the wayward girl did not return home from school. Then inquiries were made and the telephone and telegraph wires were kept busy.

The team was left in Columbus, from whence a liveryman telephoned Shanks to come and get it. Thursday noon, S. Kiesel, father of the girl, left for Centerville, Iowa, to see the elopers. Soon after his departure a letter was received from the elopers asking for the girls' clothes to be sent to Livonia, Mo. These items are picked up prominently, not touched for, but we think over the case. What had will do when he catches the runaways, we cannot predict, but think that the parental blessing would be better than the irate father's boot.

"The Sign of the Cross" will be seen at North opera house, Jan. 21, '07. This dramatic opera, one of the most ennobling plays in dramatic history, will be given by a strong company, carefully chosen by Mr. R. G. Carrelin, who has been the manager for five years, who has purchased the sole rights for the United States and Canada for this play. The scenery and costumes are of the richest splendor, and the massive architecture and luxurious surroundings of Rome in the days of Nero combine in elaborate spectacular effects.

Wilson Barrett's impressive and powerfully constructed religious drama "The Sign of the Cross," which will be presented at North opera house on Jan. 21, '07, is full of striking contrasts. The scene is laid in Rome in the extravagant and tyrannical rule of Nero. The gorgeousness and wanton luxury of the Roman court is shown in broad colors. Offsetting this, there is the simple dress and lowly men of the band of Christians whose persecution and martyred victory in their faith form the main theme of the deeply interesting story of the play.

George M. Pinneo, physical director of the Lincoln Y. M. C. A. has been designated to take charge of the athletic show to be given on Saturday evening, February 9, before the state Y. M. C. A. convention at Columbus. Saturday evening has been set apart for the physical department of the association. Early in the evening an address touching upon the work of the physical department in the association will be given, and at 8:30 the athletic exhibition will take place. As the session will be held in the opera house Mr. Pinneo expects to put on an exhibition that will be meritorious and one that will please the people. He will take with him a squad of twelve or fifteen picked men from the local association, who will put on most of the show. In the Lincoln association's physical department are a number of athletes of exceptional ability, who can put on an interesting program, as has been demonstrated in the recent gymnasium exhibitions held here. Mr. Pinneo plans to give the Columbus athletes a part of the program.—Lincoln Journal.

The following will be interesting news for those familiar with the Lillie case: "The greater part of the $8,000 insurance money due on the life of Mrs. Lillie's husband is the subject of suits now pending in the courts. Only a part of the fraternal insurance money has ever been paid. The tribe of Ben Fnr paid the sum of $750 for her little girl Edna, but contested the remainder of the policy. There was due from the Modern Woodmen the sum of $5,000, but that society contested payment and the case is still in the district court. The A. O. U. W. paid $2,000 to the account of the little girl, Mrs. Lillie waiving all claim to the money."

The dissolution of the firm of Abts & Calto last week was one of the important business changes in Columbus for some time. Starting in business nearly twenty years ago without any capital, they have by hard work built up a wholesale business that is a credit to Columbus. From the little warehouse with a stock of coal and salt, additions have been made until they now occupy the present commodious building. The new firm will be H. W. Abts & Co. and Mr. Abts will still cover the territory and his son, M. C. Abts will have charge of the house. Mr. Calto has not decided as yet what he will do in the future, and is at present completing the details of closing up his affairs connected with the old firm.

At Platte Center where can be found four saloons, and every body should be difficult to quench their thirst without any difficulty, yet some parties who evidently did not know their capacity, broke into one of the places and loaded up with the wet goods sufficient to last them for some time to come. The Platte Center Signal says: "Some malicious thief, or thieves, broke into Reilly's saloon Sunday night by breaking the lock on the back door. At what time this was done is a matter of speculation, but the probability is that it was between six and seven o'clock. The barkeeper left there about six o'clock and Marshal Carrig, who uses the middle room where the stove is, for a warming station, went in a little before seven, and as he has a key to the east door he had no occasion to go into the south room where the entrance was made, but he is positive that it did not occur after he first went in as he was out and in every ten minutes from that time until morning. The only thing taken away, as far as he can discover, was a two gallon demijohn of alcohol and two bar bottles, one containing whiskey and the other rum. The drawer to the cash register was open and contained some twelve dollars, but it is evident that money was not what they wanted, as this was undisturbed. The malicious part of the affair appeared when it was discovered that the Journal and ledger, containing some thirteen hundred dollars in accounts, had been burned. Carrig noticed the burned paper in the stove when he put coal in the stove in the evening, but thought little of it at the time. Paper ashes could be seen in the stove next morning. Reilly had no safe and the books lay on the desk. The only theory advanced is that these books were destroyed for pure curiosity, or else by some one who owed an account and wanted to destroy the record of it. Undoubtedly it was the work of local talent, and the question is, who?"

Last Wednesday Anton Hughes and Ed. Theuby became weary of the atmosphere at the county jail and decided that they would like to again be free. They made their escape through the east window, and at once started down the railroad track. They were seen by Mrs. Louis Lachnit and Chris Gass, who reported the matter to Deputy Sheriff Lachnit. He at once started in pursuit and sighted them two miles east of town, making their way northeast as fast as they could. In a short time he was close enough to call to them to halt, but they did not pay any attention to his demand. He then sent a shot from his revolver which came uncomfortably close to them, and they promptly stopped and gave themselves up. They are now safely behind the bars and will complete their sentences which they are serving for stealing some liquor from Metheny's saloon.

As a result of a stroke of apoplexy last Tuesday, John W. Witchey, one of the first settlers in the neighborhood of Duncan, passed away the same day. Mr. Witchey was a native of Switzerland, being born in Canton Bern, January 19, 1829. When a young man he came to this country, locating in California in 1856, during the gold excitement. Later he went to Wisconsin, and from there he came to Platte county. He is survived by seven children, Mrs. Wm. Kuntzelman of Columbus, Mrs. Stella Hardell of Silver Creek, Mrs. Emma Kimball of Boise City, Idaho, Abner and Arthur Witchey of Duncan, and Bert and Fred Witchey, who live in Oregon. Mr. Witchey's wife died about seven years ago.
