CANADA'S GOOD TIMES.

The Immigration During 1905 Was 216,000.

A LITTLE ROMANCE
They had come to the select board house the same week. It was easy enough to recall the date of Miss Forben's arrival because of the sensation her first appearance at dinner created. The lady had enough of the roast left for croquet next day, all because every one was so busy gazing at Miss Forben. She was a perfect blonde, with bright, pretty eyes and a charming manner. The three eligible young men who boarded there began eyeing one another with dawning dislike before even that evening was over. By the end of the week it was an openly acknowledged race between them.
Miss Forben took the attention condescendingly as was the right of a beauty. A girl as pretty as she really could not be blamed for coquetting a bit; but the other boarders wondered whether she was not sure of some millionaire, that she should trifle with Robinson, the broker, who had a small fortune besides; with Harris, the young lawyer, who was making a decided financial success; and with Van Norman, who had just got an increase in salary to $3,000 a year. This clientele shows what a very select boarding house it was.
This being the situation, it is scarcely to be wondered at that Miss Galvey had been at the house three days before Robinson, Harris and Van Norman were aware of the fact. It is doubtful if they knew what she looked like. That was the effect. Miss Forben's proximity had on most other girls. They were mere dark blots beneath naturally shy and did not look at one save for the briefest instant, otherwise they might have noticed that she had eyes unusually large and soft and darkly appealing. Her face was the oval that artists love and her lips finely molded and sensitive.
It was the day Van Norman was feeling blue because Miss Forben had forgotten to thank him for the violets. It seemed ungrateful even for a belle and, besides, she had laughed twice at Robinson's astute jokes. Van Norman was staring gloomily at his plate, when his side glance showed him a rarely beautiful hand. To his surprise he found it was Miss Galvey's hand.
He turned to her with a casual remark and got a brief glance into her eyes. The next day he addressed another remark to Miss Galvey to see if her eyes really were dark as he remembered. He was recalled by a laughing challenge from Miss Forben. She would allow no wandering of her cavaliers' eyes. For the first time Van Norman regarded her critically. He found something singularly shallow in her bright and alluring face. It dawned upon him that the look she gave him was identical with the one she had just given Robinson and would eventually bestow on Harris. He could even see Harris' floral offering in her hands without a jealous pang and for the first time her trick of nibbling the petals did not appeal to him. They were all in the big parlor at the time and for once Miss Galvey had not fed straight to her room. She was watching Miss Forben with a little pained frown.
"It hurts me to see a beautiful flower ill-treated," she said, half apologetically, when she caught Van Norman looking at her.
"It does me, too," agreed Van Norman emphatically. He told himself that he had always disliked seeing Miss Forben devour her roses and carnations, although he had never put the idea into words. Any sensitive person would feel that way. Then he wondered if Miss Galvey ever had any flowers sent her. He wondered about it for three days before he began wondering if she would think it fresh of him if he should send her some. He could see her slender, beautiful fingers taking them from the box almost caressingly. That was the way she had handled the crushed carnation Miss Forben had dropped in the hall the evening before. Any one who so loved flowers for their own sakes really ought to have them about. Van Norman felt a righteous glow when he left the order at the florist's that noon.
Miss Galvey did not forget to thank him. There was a soft glow on her face as she passed him in the hall.
"Thank you so much," she said. "They are lovely—and it was kind of you."
"Not—not at all!" stammered Van Norman, his heart suddenly thumping. Maybe it was the hall light that lent her such an ethereal beauty. At dinner he regarded Robinson and Harris wonderingly. Could they not see beneath that shallow, giddy, selfish, blonde young creature the heart of a woman a man could really love?
Van Norman choked abruptly on his salad and stopped at that word. By the time the dessert arrived he had calmed down and was getting used to the amazing, absolutely wonderful fact that he was in love with the loveliest girl on earth and was scared to death for fear she would not consider such a worm as himself. Miss Forben sparkled and jested and beguiled in vain that evening. It was about two months later, just at the time when both Robinson and Harris had decided that, after all, they were not in love with Miss Forben, that Van Norman's engagement to Miss Galvey was announced.
At present Miss Forben is doing without roses and violets. — Chicago Daily News.

ONE DAY BEHIND SCHEDULE.
Boston Business Man Wanted to Take Time to Catch Up.
Several years ago, when the University of Chicago held its centennial celebration, John D. Rockefeller was its guest for several days. A bewildering succession of functions followed one another in such quick succession that each affair was from one to four hours late.
At the great banquet on the closing day, Mr. Rockefeller, in his after-dinner speech, told the following story:
"I have felt for the past 24 hours like the Boston business man who lived in the suburbs and came in to his office every day. One winter afternoon he took the train for his home, but a terrific snowstorm was raging, and about half way to his suburb the train was snowed in. All night the passengers were imprisoned, but early in the morning they managed to reach a nearby telegraph station, and the Boston man sent the following dispatch to his office:
"Will not be in the office to-day. Have not got home yesterday yet."

NO RELIEF FROM ECZEMA
For Over Two Years—Patent Medicines, Quack Cures, and Doctors' Fail—Cuticura Succeeded.
"I was very badly afflicted with eczema for more than two years. The parts affected were my limbs below the knees. I tried all the physicians in the town and all in the surrounding towns, and I also tried all the patent remedies that I heard of, besides all the cures advised by old women and quacks, and found no relief whatever until I commenced using the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. In the Cuticura Remedies I found immediate relief, and was soon sound and well. C. V. Beliz, Tippecanoe, Ind., Nov. 15, '05."

GUIDES CHILDREN.
Experience and a Mother's Love Make Advice Valuable.
An ill mother writes about feeding children:
"If mothers would use Grape-Nuts more for their little ones, there would be less need for medicines and fewer doctor bills."
"If those suffering from indigestion and stomach troubles would live on Grape-Nuts, toast and good milk for a short period they would experience more than they otherwise would believe."
"Our children have all learned to know the benefit of Grape-Nuts as an appetizing, strengthening food. It is every evening, with few variations, like this: 'Mamma, let's have toast and Grape-Nuts for breakfast; or, let's have eggs and Grape-Nuts'—never forgetting the latter."
"One of our boys in school and 15 years of age repeatedly tells me his mind is so much brighter after having Grape-Nuts as a part if not all his breakfast." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in 10 pages. "There's a Reason."

THE MILKMAN WAS LATE THAT DAY, BUT NONE COMPLAINED.
A few days ago people on Linwood boulevard who patronize a certain milkman missed his familiar breakfast ring, says the Kansas City Star. It was late in the morning when he finally made the rounds. And the women scolded.
"I'll have to take milk from somebody else!" one irate housewife snapped.
"All right, madam," he said, softly. "Something in his voice made her pause."
"What made you late?" she demanded, still angry.
A tear welled on the milkman's eye and trickled slowly down his cheek.
"When—when I left home," he began.
He paused and gulped at something in his throat.
"When I left," he said, "my baby—was dying. I knew someone—would be—angry—with me if I didn't—come so I—"
He could say nothing more. The woman said, gently:
"I'm sorry."
Next day the milkman failed to appear. The second day he was around very early.
"We buried her yesterday," was his explanation.
No one chided him. They understood. His baby was dead.

THREE EPOCHS IN A WOMAN'S LIFE

MRS. ELVA BARBER EDWARDS
There are three critical stages in a woman's life which leave their mark in her career. The first of these stages is womanhood, or the change from a care free girl to budding womanhood. The second is motherhood, and the third is Change of Life.

Perils surround each of these stages, and most of the misery that comes to women through ill health dates from one or another of these important crises.

Women should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs has carried thousands of young girls over the critical period of puberty, and in later years carried them safely through the change of life more successfully than any other remedy in the world. Thousands of testimonials from grateful persons, two of which are here published, substantiate this fact beyond contradiction.

Mrs. George Walters of Woodlawn, Ill. writes: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"I feel it my duty to tell you of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me in preparing for childbirth. After suffering and losing my children a friend advised me to try your valuable medicine, and the result was that I had very little inconvenience, a quick recovery, and..."
