Files of the Journal April 2, 1873.

Our young friends, Guy C. and George Harch 22 and 23. E. Barnum, are putting in one hundred and thirty acres of wheat. They sow the Russian, which they regard as alto-the guest of her sister, Mrs. M. J. gether the best variety for both quality Kelley. and quanity.

W. D. Wilson, a new settler on Shell Oreck, desiring to form an acquaintance with the Journal, proposed to read fiftytwo numbers on trial. He informs us that he has some experience in the management of sheep, and will begin at his home by keeping and raising sheep We have no doubt but that the business will prove profitable in Nebraska.

The first case of boots ever shipped from Columbus to Omaha went last week. They were manufactured by M T. Kinney for one of the Omaha dealers and we predict that there will be call for more of the same sort. The boots are a number one article, and are furnish ed at a price sufficiently low for retail dealars to make a good profit. We are glad to know that Mr. Kinney's business is increasing at a rapid rate. Columbus might, just as well as not, furnish boots and shoes for all Nebraska cities, at least. Living is comparatively cheap here, rents are low, and hands plenty.

Now is the time for farmers to con sider how to obtain their fuel for next year. After some little experience, we believe it is the cheapest and best plan for every farmer who has not grawing timber of his own, to plant an extra amount of corn for his own use, and some to sell to his neighbors for fuel, and thus spare, for a few weeks, the young timber now growing, which in a short time will produce an abundance for fuel and other purposes. We must remember that corn can be produced every year in Nebraska, and that it takes several years to grow a tree. It is a matter of wisdom as well as economy to use the corn and spare the young trees.
