NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS NOTES.

From the Clarkson Herald.
Emil R. Dredel has been promoted to the position of assistant cashier of the Clarkson State Bank.
The Clarkson Milling Co.'s new elevator is completed, work on the same having been finished Saturday.
Quite a few farmers south of here have planted their corn early as replanting some this week as it rotted because of the cold weather.
Among a bunch of hogs brought in yesterday by Ed Arnold were two hogs the combined weight of which was 1,150 pounds one—a Poland China, weighing 630, the other, a Duroc Jersey, 520.
G. H. Birchard of Lincoln had the contract and he put up a modern, thoroughly equipped elevator, with a capacity of 30,000 bushels. It was turned over to the owners Saturday and they at once commenced to buy grain.
Last Saturday, Joe F. Jirovec disposed of his livery and feed business to Joe F. Lodi, who at once took charge of the same. We wish the new proprietor success and are pleased to know that Mr. Jirovec will not leave Clarkson but will engage in some other line of work.
John Noh of Midland precinct, who has a flock of 1,700 sheep and lambs on his farm, is experiencing considerable trouble with wolves. It was some time before Mr. Noh could account for the loss of a number of his sheep and lambs; the animals attacked showed signs of weakness and each bore the imprint of teeth on both sides of the throat. Since the owner has discovered the source of the trouble he is taking over possible precaution to guard against it. He lost about seventy-five head.

Central City Nonpareil.
Judge Roeder, in a decision announced Friday, rules that Low Powell's application for a saloon license at Chapman shall not be granted. The decision is based on the insufficiency of the petition and in line with the recent opinion of the supreme court which says that saloons cannot be rendered free holders solely for the purpose of signing a petition. This decision probably means that Chapman will be with out a saloon for the coming year.

LINDSEY.
From the Opinion.
The Lindsey Opinion which has been published in Lindsey for three years and 36 weeks, has suspended, getting out the final issue last week. The Opinion was founded by Edward A. Broadball who put A. M. Church in charge during the last year was E. G. Johnson who sold the plant to Mr. Currier of Albion. Mr. Currier has decided to move the outfit from this place.

MONROE.
From the Republican.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Webster returned from Omaha last Friday, where they took their little daughter Alice to be operated on for throat trouble.
The Monroe ball team played a return game with the Indians at Genoa Wednesday and were defeated by a score of 8 to 5. Both teams put up a good game.
J. S. Leon left Tuesday for Council Bluffs, Ia., where he will visit a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Gates, and then go to his old home in Indiana for an extended visit.
B. M. VanBaskirt, the new Union Pacific agent has not moved his family to Monroe yet, but will in the near future should he retain this station permanently.
Village Marshal E. W. Mann has begun to enforce the ordinance against dogs that do not have the necessary tag, and as a result there are quite a few less undesirable canines in the village.
George S. Truman, who has been quite sick for some time, is reported very low and no hopes are entertained for his recovery. Mr. Truman is almost ninety years of age, and has been a resident of Platte county for over a quarter of a century.
The local Odd Fellows are preparing for a public installation and open meeting on Tuesday evening, July 2. Quite a number of visitors from other lodges are expected to be present. Refreshments will be served and a general good time is anticipated.
Frank Thompson was bitten by a dog belonging to D. W. Ziegler, this week. The wound was treated at once and no serious results are looked for, but owners of dogs that are inclined to be vicious should take care of them or the village marshal should take the matter in hand.
While breaking up the pasture on Tom Hill's farm, north of town, James Gillespie found an Indian flint tomahawk and a pipe. Years ago this pasture was the abode of a red man and also part of it used for a burying ground by them. The land has never been cultivated until this year and the relics of former days remained hidden in the ground until the land was plowed.

PLATTE CENTER.
Tommy Maber has started a barber shop at Tarnov. He will be there each Tuesday and Friday and will smooth up the Tarnov oysters in an artistic manner.
Miss Theresa Greisen came home from Shelby, Neb., Monday evening and will remain until after the celebration of St. Anthony Day at the home of her parents in Burrows township.
Mr. Patrick Fenton, of Knoxville, Iowa, visited over Sunday at the home of his brother Simon at this place. Mr. Fenton is a companionable gentleman, and has visited here before. He returned home on Monday, accompanied by his brother Simon as far as Columbus.
The fourth of July will be here three weeks from yesterday. Platte Center will not celebrate this time. Columbus Humphrey and several other small neighboring hamlets are making elaborate preparations to do the occasion justice, and Centerites will probably go visiting.
For the third time this season a game of ball between Columbus and Platte Center was prevented last Sunday by the weather. This time the Columbus boys came up, but as there was a shower of rain about every fifteen minutes all the afternoon the game had to be postponed.
The good people of St. Anthony's congregation celebrated the feast of their Patron Saint on Thursday last. Solemn and impressive services were held at the church during the morning and afternoon. The remainder of the day was spent in social and entertaining gatherings.
Among those from a distance who attended the celebration were Mrs. and Mrs. Joseph Gillespie and family, of Humphrey, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Greisen, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Krings, Messrs Phillip and Peter Greisen, of Columbus; Messieurs Robt. Kay, Caroline Labens, Max Bruckner, Lizzie Frey, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lohlig, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Ripp, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Guesenher, and the Misses Agnes Bruckner and Maggie Ziegler, of Platte Center.

LADY ISABEL'S GUEST

By MRS. NEVELL
(Copyright, by Joseph B. Devine.)

Lady Isabel leaned back with a despairing sigh.
"You see," she explained to me, "Vernon's Aunt Marian has just written to say she is coming to us for two whole months. Two months," groaned Lady Isabel, "and one of them will be in the height of the season."
"It will please your husband to have her," I said tentatively.
"Will it?" echoed Lady Isabel. "You should have heard what he said when I showed him the letter."
"Why do you have her then, if neither of you want her?"
"Vernon says we must, because she is awfully rich, and has no one else to leave her money to; and, of course, I have my poor darling daughter Bab's future to consider," said Lady Isabel unselfishly.
"Poor you," I said with sympathy. She smiled. "It'll be poor Vernon—he won't see much of me, Marjorie; for I am too ill, really, to come downstairs."
I started. "Are you ill?"
Lady Isabel leaned back in her chair and sighed faintly. "No, but I am going to be—that is how I mean to get her away before the season if I can."
"But you can't be ill if you aren't ill," I said argumentatively.
"Can't I?" said Lady Isabel, "you wait and see."
I felt rather sorry for Lord Etchington, whom I met on the stairs.
"Going, Miss Anstruther," he said; "has Isabel told you my Aunt Marian is coming to us for two months?" He laughed, then sighed dejectedly.

Sultan's Ragged Soldiers.
The sultan's army suggests a regular country circus. Every Friday one may see a sample of these monkey-like soldiers at the parade of the Selamluk, which takes place on the Kasba square at 11 a. m. A battalion marches past in double column and salutes the governor, who goes from his palace to the mosque.
All these soldiers are poorly equipped. Their uniforms have lost their color and their trousers are too short, showing their legs, which shine as if they had been covered with shoe polish. However, it would be a mistake to think that this gang of ragged ruffians could stand a fight. Fanaticism will make heroes of them, for their contempt of death is absolute.

German Industry Threatened.
The passing of the German meerschaum trade seems inevitable. Practically all the known deposits of meerschaum have been exhausted. In the last five months the price of the raw material has gone up 50 per cent. In a single town, Ruhla, in the Thuringian forest, over 3,000 workmen have been employed in this industry. The only place where meerschaum is now found is in the mines of Eski-Schehr. The output there is small and most of it goes to England and America.

A Most Fearsome Looking Old Lady.

thank you so much; and be sure you come again on Monday afternoon."
The following Monday I therefore went round early after luncheon to see Lady Isabel and help her entertain her aunt, but I found the house in a state of great commotion, and the hall full of boxes and parcels and pugs and the parrot.
"Are you going away, Lady St. Almond?" I asked the old lady, as she came out of the morning-room, giving loud directions to her maid about her luggage and her pets.
"Yes, yes, I am going at once," she replied hurriedly. "Such a dreadful thing has happened, Miss Anstruther. She drew me into the morning-room. 'Don't be alarmed,' she said tragically, looking exceedingly frightened herself; 'don't be alarmed, my dear. Here, put some of this on your handkerchief.' She poured something exceedingly pungent on to my handkerchief as she spoke with so shaking a hand that most of it unfortunately fell on my new white blouse. 'There is no danger, I assure you; none whatever.'"
"What is it?" I asked; "whatever is the matter?"
"Poor Isabel! I am sorry I misjudged her. I really thought her illness was fancy; but they say it is measles—German measles—the most virulent and contagious kind. I only hope it's nothing worse. Doctors often make mistakes. I am not at all nervous for myself," said the old lady, who was obviously in a state of the most violent alarm; "but my maid is quite a young girl, and these infectious things are so trying, I thought I had better return home at once. My nephew is unfortunately away," she continued. "He was obliged to go out of town yesterday morning—so very unfortunate for him. I wanted to wire, but Isabel would not hear of it."
"I will go up and see her at once," I said, turning to leave the room.
"Oh! my dear,"—the old lady looked horrified—"pray do not run so needless a risk; it would really be most unwise of you; I must protest."
"But I am not at all nervous," I reassured her.
She held out her hand. "Very well, then, if you really will; but it is not wise of you—not at all wise. However, you know best—I will say goodbye, though, as I dreading you will be down before I go."
"Oh, I can easily come down and see you off."
"No, no," said the old lady sharply; "I must really beg of you not to do so —there is my young maid, you see; for her sake I must not run any needless risks. Is your cab there, Barnes?"

She was evidently in a fever to depart, but luckily was not kept much longer in suspense, for, as I turned up the corridor towards Lady Isabel's bedroom, I heard the first of the boxes bumped heavily against the top of the cab and the brougham drive up to take the Aunt.
Elsie came to the door to meet me. "How is Lady Isabel?" I asked. "I am sorry to hear she is so ill, Elsie. Elsie's conduct was certainly remarkable, if not actually heartless. She passed me, and leaning over the stairs, looked eagerly down into the hall below. Returning a moment later, she ushered me with many apologies into Lady Isabel's bedroom.
The blinds were drawn and the furniture was carefully covered with dust sheets, but beyond a faint odor of some delicate perfume there was no sign of Lady Isabel.
"Why, Elise?—I turned to the girl in utter amazement—'where on earth is the matter?'"
"Hair lidoeship is away to the seaside, to Eastbourne," said Elsie, her eyes demurely fixed on the tip of her shoe. "Hair lidoeship, she think it the queesteek way to—' Elise hesitated—'to—"
"Yes, I understand," I interposed hurriedly.
"And so she goes away yesterday in the morning, but I telegraph her now, this moment, mademoiselle, and she return in the morning home again. Will mademoiselle come back to-morrow afternoon?" she added anxiously.
"Yes, I will come," I replied.
As I went slowly down the steps and into the sunny street again a carriage, weighted heavily with two months' luggage, turned clumsily round the corner, and I caught a last glimpse of the solemn face of a black-nosed pug looking thoughtfully out of the window into the street.
