Work for the Accountant.

Inasmuch as state officers have refused to approve any more state depository bonds given by the auditor's bonding company it is said he will pry into their affairs through the state accountant to ascertain whether or not their contracts are just and reasonable and legal. The result of such an investigation is awaited with interest. In view of the alleged unjustness of several state contracts and allowance of claims against the state, a thorough overhauling of all departments of state is looked for as contemplated by the state accountant law. There is a great deal of effective work in sight for him. Under the law framed by the men who expected to get the job of accountant and the changes made during the progress of the bill in the legislature it is difficult to ascertain whether the accountant is accountable to the governor or the auditor. One faction in the legislature that was worked by the friends of the bill thought they would have a better show for the job with the auditor and others desired to shift or divide the responsibility and the approval of the appointment and reports are required by both state officers. The law evidently leaves the accountant under the direction of the state auditor so far as his work is concerned. It is believed the auditor will now ask the accountant to ascertain what the board of public lands and buildings paid for material to make changes in certain public buildings, changes in material entering into public buildings and whether or not prices in general named in contracts for supplies for the state are as low as the market affords.

As to An Extra Session.

The resolutions passed by the Omaha Real Estate exchange asking the governor to call an extra session of the legislature for the purpose of enacting a law to guarantee bank deposits have been received at the executive office. Since the recent panic Governor Sheldon has been spending a great portion of his time looking into the banking business of the state and studying the advisability of some recommendation to the legislature. Before he comes to any decision he will communicate not only with the various bankers of the state but with business men and others. He is also studying the bank reports for the last ten years and analyzing the same, with a view to determining whether a lack of confidence on the part of the people is responsible for a decrease in the deposits or whether the decrease is due to other causes. It is safe to predict that the executive will not call an extra session of the legislature unless he is convinced that it is a lack of confidence which has caused the slump in deposits as shown by the recent bank statement.

Oil Inspector Reports.

State Oil Inspector Allen has filed a report with Governor Sheldon covering the business done in his office during the year 1907. The report shows the inspection fees amounted to $26,330.30; miscellaneous receipts in September, $3.60;, miscellaneous fees for February, $95; balance on hand January, 1907, $1,186.69; total collections for the year. $27,615.59; barrels inspected. 262,495; approved, 261,735; barrels rejected, 760. Grain Rates too High. State Senator C. A. Sibley of Frontier county has complained formally that grain rates charged by the Burlington road in Nebraska are too high. He asks the railroad commission to reduce them 15 per cent below the reduction of 15 per cent already brought about by the Aldrich bill. He appeared before the commissioners and took formal action. A day for hea: ing will be fixed and the board will consider evidence in the case. An order of the board reducing rates was made several months ago, but was held up by legal proceedings instituted by the railroads. Following this action the commission decided it had proceeded wrongfully in acting on its own motion and decided that reductions of rates could be brought about only on formal complaint. A short time later Senator Sibley declared he would complain and now he has fulfilled his promise.

Cost of Pure Food Department. The last legislature appropriated a total of $25,580 for the support of the food commissioner's department for a period of two years. Deputy Food Commissioner J. W. Johnson has filed his semi-annual report with the governor for the period from June 1 to November 30. In that time the department spent $4,080.20, according to the report. Little was done during the first part of the semi-annual period because Mr. Johnson was not appointed till July 5 and considerable time was required to get the department in working order. The department is likely to do better in the way of spending money from this on with its little army of inspectors, who necessarily travel a great deal. No drug inspector was appointed till about the close of the semi-annual period. The largest item for office expenses was $215 for laboratory tables.

Corn Show Prizes.

Warrants were drawn at the office of the State Board of Agriculture for the following winners of premiums at the Corn Improvers' association contest at the state farm, held last week, premiums to the amount of $150 having been offered by the State Board of Agriculture:

Cannon for the State House. The capitol building is soon to be protected by a battery of four guns. There is no immediate fear of an attack from night riders or other foes, but the guns must be placed somewhere and it was thought best to have them under the eye of the commander in chief of the Nebraska national guard. There is one smoothbore cannon of an ancient pattern on the north side of the state house. A similar back number is to be brought from Brownville where it guarded the early settlers. Two will come from Wymore, where they have been in the possession of the national guard battery for many years.

REMARKABLE RISE OF COMMIS-SIONER JOHN H. O'BRIEN.

Arrived in New York Only Few Years Aco. But Has Had Meteoric Career Since Becoming Identifled with McClellan.

New York-From newspaper reporter to political leader and head of a great city department employing thousands of men and spending millions of dollars every year—such is the almost phenomenal stride in the narrow space of four years of John H. O'Brien, commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity, who for two years, and particularly during the last few months, has been conspicuously in the public eye.

It shows, among other things, how easily success may be achieved in the great city of New York.

Had he graduated from the ranks of the Democratic organization he would be the object of only ordinary attention. But he never was a district captain. He never was an election worker. In fact, he never be longed to the Tammany organization until after he became a recognized leader.

He found himself in New York one day and soon after the close of the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo. and although he had no intention of remaining he yielded to the requests of editors for whom he had done work in Buffalo and took a position as reported. When he reached New York, at the age of 30, he was almost boyish in appearance, and while acquainted with many New York politicians, whom he met while an Albany correspondent, he had no knowledge of metropolitan newspaper methods.

But he knew how to meet men, how to get information, had a faculty for absorbing things quickly and appreciating their significance, and he knew how to write. The result was that he came to be quickly recognized as a first-class reporter. For a time he did whatever there was to be done. Gradually it developed that he was peculiarly fitted for political work, and during the campaign of 1904 he reported the progress of the canvass of Col. George B. McClellan, who was running for mayor for the first time. His work showed he had a keen knowledge of politics, and it attracted the attention of Col. McClellan, who, after being elected, offered him the place of private secretary at a salary of $5,000 a year.

It developed that the qualifications which had ben pointed out by his Buffalo friends made him an unusually successful secretary, and made him greatly admired by the mayor. So well did he familiarize himself with the metropolitan political machinery that Mayor McClellan, when he was renominated in the fall of 1905, chose him as his political manager and announced that he would conduct his campaign independent of Tammany hall. The spectacle of a man 32 years old who had been in the city less than four years conducing a mayoralty campaign in a year when Tammany hall was in the throes of one of the hardest fights of a decade attracted much

Not altogether satisfied himself that he was ideally fitted for the job. Mr. O'Brien resigned as private secretary, rolled up his sleeves and went to work. It quickly became evident that his ideas of conducting a campaign-and they were in line with those of the mayorwere vastly different from those used by Tammany hall. It became apparent, also, that in the matter of running a campaign on a high plane the youthful manager could teach the old-time managers a few things. He worked from nine o'clock in the morning until one or two o'clock the next morning, and by his faithfulness he earned the sincere friendship of Mayor McClellan, who was reelected.

The city was filled with rumors as to what O'Brien's reward would be. No one doubted that he could have any job which the mayor had power to give him. He was talked of as chamberlain and finally was named as fire commissioner, which pays $7,500 a year.

In person Commissioner O'Brien is about five feet ten inches tall,
