Collision with Gigantic Footballer Left Soldier Undisturbed.

In the recently published biography of Col. Fred Burnaby there is a characteristic story told by his friend, Lord Binning, of that soldier of Herculean frame and reckless courage: We were engaged in a football match on the green inside Windsor cavalry barracks, and the verandas were crowded with onlookers as the colonel dressed for London in frock coat and tall hat, with a cigar in his mouth, came out of the officers' quarters and proceeded slowly across a corner of the ground, apparently oblivious of the fact that a match was in progress at the time. At this moment our fullback, a gigantic Yorkshireman, named Bates, who must have weighed nearer 15 than 14 stone, charging impetuously for the ball, dashed full into Burnaby. The impact was terrific, but while the Tyke, hurled backward by the shock, as though he had collided with a mountain, lay gasping on the ground, neither Burnaby's hat not the angle of his cigar was in the smallest degree disturbed-in fact he scarcely seemed to realize that a collision had taken place. When he did so he removed his cigar from his mouth, and with his pleasant smile, said: "Dear me, I hope I am not interfering with the game." The shout of delight which went up from the verandas was a thing to remember.

Curious Medieval Ceremony in Law Courts of London.

One of the most curious survivals of the quaint methods of other times was witnessed the other day in one of the London law courts. Here the solicitor of the city of London attended before the king's remembrances to render quit rent services in respect of certain properties in the city of London and the county of Salop. On the table were a block of wood, two fagots of twigs, six horseshoes, and a bag of nails. Warrants were read calling upon the tenants of the properties concerned to "come forth and do their service." whereupon the city solicitor gravely placed one of the fagots on the block and cut it with a hatchet. Then he cut the fagot with a billhook and afterward tendered the six horseshoes and counted out 60 nails, in Our new implement business man, heaps of ten, adding one extra nail, Louis Loseke, will soon be ready to at which the King's Remembrancer start up in the old Fred Moeller build- | said: "Good number." Chimney Money. One bygone tax that Mr. Lloyd George is not likely to revive is "chimney money." Pepys records on March 3, 1662, that "on this day the parliament hath voted two shillings per annum for every chimney in England, as a constant revenue forever to the crown." But it was desperately unpopular from the first, says the London Chronicle. At the end of June, 1662, "Much clamor against the chimney money; and the people say they will not pay it without force." It was not until October, 1666, however, that it was successfully "moved that the chimney money might be taken from the king, and an equal revenue of something else might be found for the king, and people be enjoined to buy off this tax of chimney money forever at eight years' purchase, which will raise present money, as they think, £1,600,-000, and the state be eased of an ill burden and the king be supplied of something as good or better for his

Tribes Cling to Primitive Customs of Their Ancestors.

The blowgun is still popular for hunting birds among the Koasati Indians of Louisiana. This weapon consists of a tube, usually of cane, about six feet long, rubbed smooth on the inside with an implement made for the purpose, and carefully straightened with the aid of fire. Slender-pointed darts about eight inches long are used as ammunition, each one wrapped neatly along a third of its length with thistledown or cotton to make it fit the inside of the tube. The hunter places a dart in the tube, which he raises to his lips and aims at his game; then a quick puff of the breath drives the little dart flying with sufficient force to impale and kill a small bird or

I discovered a curious industry among the Koasati-the weaving of Spanish moss into fabrics. During my sojourn with the southern tribes I had heard that their ancestors once made blankets of moss, but this was the first time I had ever seen the process or its products. The moss, which may be seen festooning the trees all through the south, is cured and then spun with a simple contrivance. The moss yarn is strung on a frame and woven into blankets. In former years the Indians wove large moss blankets for bedding and rugs; but at the present day saddle blankets only are Among the most interesting things found among this tribe were two of the old hand-made pottery vessels, now very rare among eastern Indians, a drum made of a cypress "knee," some very fine beaded shoulder sashes, a collection of baskets representing many weaves and forms, and some silver head-bands, brooches, and other ornaments laboriously pounded out of coins by the Indian silversmiths .- M. MAKES WORK FOR SCIENTISTS. Eminent Men Busy Investigating Possibilities of Radium.

The University of Vienna, which has received, through the Vienna Academy of Sciences, an anonymous donation of 500,000 kronen for the establishment of a "Radium institute." is rapidly becoming famous among physicists for its experimental work on the wonderful radium emanations. The rarity and great cost of radium neces sarily restrict the number of investigators, and Sir William Ramsay, who in his recent experiments has gone far toward proving the suspected transmutation of radium into helium and other elements, was recently specially honored by the Vienna Academy of Sciences by the loan of a fraction of a gramme of radium for the purpose of enabling him to continue his valuable investigations. A gramme of radium, it has been calculated, has stored up in it energy equal to one horse power for 15 days; but it parts with its energy so slowly-it cannot be stayed or hurried—that it takes some 30,000 years to exhaust itself.

"Not exactly," said the tailor. "Roman numerals are getting to be rather popular in writing the names of streets. Fifth avenue business men are particularly partial to them. On cards and in newspaper and street car advertising you may frequently see the address of some tailor, haberdasher, or other tradesman, written Vth avenue. So far the other avenues have not adopted the style to any great extent, but the time may come when the business houses on all those streets will write IVth, VIth, VIIth, VIIth, and IXth avenues."

Thirsting for Information.

Little Gertrude, entering a butcher's shop for the first time, stood gazing around her in silent absorption. PEN NAMES OF WOMEN WRITERS.

Origin of "George Eliot"-Why Mrs. Harrison Chose "Lucas Malet."

Miss Gregg, who is known as "Sydney C. Grier," chose "Sydney" because it might be interpreted as either a masculine or feminine designation. "Grier" is a Shetland name, and at that time she was much interested in those far away isles. "C" was inserted to make the name look a natural

Mrs. Harrison's reason for concealment as "Lucas Malet" was that she "did not think it right to trade on the Kingsley name," lest she should do it discredit. She therefore chose the "surnames of her grandmother and great-grandmother, both women of remarkable intelligence and character."

The pseudonym of "George Egerton," adopted by the lady now Mary Chavelita Golding-Bright, also springs from family associations. Her mother's name was Isabel George Bynon, and "George Bynon" was her first disguise. But the name of Bynon had been unlucky, and it was quickly dropped for that of "Egerton," the paptismal name of her second husband. Under the "distinctive combination" of George Egerton she has published nine works since 1893.

Mary Ann Evans called herself 'George Eliot" because the first name was the Christian name of her husband, and "Eliot" was a "fine, short, full sounding name that matched her style and story."

THEORY AS TO EARTHQUAKES. his right-hand jacket pocket.-London Possibility That One Shock Has Pow er to Set Off Another.

> The possibility that the shocks of an earthquake, transmitted through the earth's mass, may "set off" another quake thousands of miles distant has been suggested by an Italian student of the subject, Signor Emilio Oddone. Of course, this would be the case only, where the crust of the earth was in such an unstable condition that a good jarring would cause slipping or breakage. Signor Oddone has recently called attention to the fact that just half an hour after the great Valparaiso earthquake another quake was recorded, the center of which was in the north Pacific, about 7,000 miles distant. The time required for an earthquake wave to traverse the solidsubstance of the earth from one of these points to the other is just the period that separated the two disturbances. It may well be, therefore, that the hig Valparaiso quake put the trigger that "exploded," so to speak, its smaller successor in the northern hemisphere.

Handsome Is as Handsome Does. Augustus Thomas, the playwright, told in a recent speech of a hunting trip he had taken in the south. They were after 'coons and 'possums, but the only trail the dogs struck was one which made them put their tails between their legs and turn for home. "Just what does a polecat look like?" Mr. Thomas asked one of his negro guides. "A polecat, boss? Why, a polecat's somefin' like a kitten, only prettier. Yes, a polecat's a heap prettier'n a kitten, ain't it, Sam?" he said, turning to another negro for corroboration. Sam did not seem so sure. He hesitated a moment.

"Well," he replied, scratching his wool, "it's always been mah contention dat handsome is as handsome does."-Everybody's Magazine.

A Privilege Denied to Queens. The ordinary maiden has one privllege which is denied to her royal sister; she can keep her exact age a secret—if she wants to. It is one of the penalties of royal ladies that they cannot exercise that prerogative. Queen Mand of Norway has entered on her fortieth year, and her birthday, on the 26th ult., was kept in real Norwegian style . Her majesty has been described as the most versatile queen in Europe. She speaks five languages and has a good working knowledge of each. Woodcarving and bookbinding are her hobbies, and in sport she has penetrated the mysteries of skiing. She sails the water like an old salt, too, and at whist she is a fine partner for her father.

Such Is Fame. A young engineer who has been doing a job in Kansas has returned to Philadelphia with his yarn.

One night he happened to be at a lit tle cross-roads grocery store at a village beyond the Ozark ridge of the mountains. Getting into conversation with the frequenters of the place, he happened to mention Chauncey M. Depew.
