

Not Another in Nebraska

The Lion and The Mouse.

The preliminary seat sale for "The Lion and The Mouse" is now in operation and there are splendid indications for its presentation at the North Theatre next week before large audiences. This play by Charles Klein which points out the mischief wrought by the centralization of financial power was the first of its kind set before playgoers and its author and promoter have received rich returns from a pecuniary point of view. Playgoers without exception to class or other distinction have always felt that they received full value for their investment and these happy conditions have resulted in a popularity for Mr. Klein's creation that is sure to keep it in the foreground of favorites for a considerable number of years. Oliver Dowd Byron and Dorothy Donnelly have the principal roles in the company booked here next week and the entire cast is of a correspondingly high order of merit. Prices 50c-75c-$1.00-$1.50.

STARTED TOO LATE IN LIFE.

Fate of Ex-Tightwad Should Point a Moral to All.

Once there was a man, dear children, who had the reputation of being a tightwad, because he dressed shabbily, seldom patronized a barber, ate his meals at five-cent lunch counters when he was down-town, and carried a dollar watch.

Yet this tightwad was generous with his family. At Christmas time he always gave his wife and children numerous and expensive presents with apparently as much enjoyment as if he were large-hearted and benevolent.

One Christmas season, after he had made his purchases for the various members of his family, not forgetting some deserving friends besides, a strange thought struck him.

"In all these years," he said, "I have not given myself any Christmas presents. I think it's my turn. I will buy a few, just for John Joseph, individually."

So he went to a tailor shop and ordered a fine suit of clothes. Then he bought a gold watch and chain and presented them to himself. He ate his meals, when down-town, at first-class restaurants, went to a barber shop for a shave every day, joined a club, and began to look around for a private secretary.

Then something happened.

What do you think it was, dear children? His family made application to the courts for a conservator, on the ground that he was no longer capable of managing his own affairs.

MADE GREAT APPEAL TO HIM.

Silence of Ants Especially Impressed Bibulous Individual.

"I hope and trust, muh po', underdone brudder," severely said good old Parson Bagster, addressing a bibulous individual member of his flock, "dat de 'stressin' eppersode of night befo' last will be a lesson to yo'!"

"Yassah!" replied the erring one, wagging his head, convincedly. "I sho'ly reggins 'twill I been uh-packin' home too many drama, now and agin, yuh late, as muh wife—fine lady as dar is in the world!—has been p'intedly tellin' me. But, on de monumental 'casion yo' defers to I gits lit up and draped down by de waystide and slept all night on an ant hill, and de paltry varmint might high eat me up. Blame 'near skinned me alive, sah, dem ants did; but dey didn't talk uh-whilst dey was doin' it. Nussah, dey never said a word 'bout de awful contamination of muh beenyus conduct, and all dis and dat and de tuder—dese ett me up in peace and quiet. And attter dis, if I keeps muh mind, whenever I gits too much 'o' dat 'ar balloon juice in muh personality, I's gwine to lay out on an ant hill all night, preference to goin' home to muh fam'bly. By de blesin' 'o' de Lawd, ants don't talk!"—Tom P. Morgan, in Puck.

The Pangs of Love.

"It's a dreadful thing to be in love," said Mr. Despairing Swain. "I have a headache that would fill three hos-pitals and then some."

Would Be Here.

A law is to be passed in France exempting wives from obeying their husbands. Isn't this a work of super-erogation?

CAME OUT ON THE OTHER SIDE.

Declaration That Put a Sudden End to Traveler's Yarns.

One of the occupants of a railway carriage was a gentleman who beguiled the time by telling some rather "tall yarns" of his experience abroad. A solemn looking individual, with a camera and a tripod, sat in a corner seat and listened without a shadow of a smile. The traveler, having concluded an impressive story, says London Punch, began again: "I never see a camera but it reminds me of a sad occurrence that befell a friend of mine while we were traveling in Italy. He was an enthusiastic amateur photographer, and when we climbed Venustus nothing would satisfy him but a near view of the crater. He wanted to go to the very edge. The guides told him of the danger. It was the last seen of my poor friend! Sad, wasn't it, sir?" he added, turning to the solemn man. The latter shook his head. "Do you doubt my word?" said the traveler. "No," returned the solemn man, "I don't doubt your word, but I fancy your memory is falling."

"Eh? How so?" "Because," said the solemn man, slowly and gravely, "because I am the man! And yet you don't remember me! I came out again on the other side of the globe—but I got my view!" There was dead silence for a few minutes afterward, and the traveler got off at the next station.

Not All Song.

Possibly all of the joys in the choir were not melodious; and it is possible there was not an overplus of melody in the whole outfit, but it was mighty pleasant to be there.

Maybe she was there—she whose presence was a world of satisfaction. And, maybe, you was to her the dearest thing in sight. Maybe so.

And who knows but she is nudging you as she reads this to you. But she hardly need do so, for the mention of the old choir in which she and you sang is enough to start the whole troop of pleasant memories into life, and cause them to hasten to answer your call.

Or, maybe you read it alone with no one to nudge, or to join you in the enjoyment of the grand review. But if you ever sang in the choir you will have a living moving memory, picture show all to yourself, nor none the less, so hardly less, enjoyable, for it will come in ahead of the scenes that invaded your later years, and before care had fastened itself like a burden upon you and made life a weariness more or less.

Why not go back and enjoy the privileges of the choir as of old. Who shall say you nay?—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Honor Discoverer of Radium.

A woman has just been elected to the head professorship of physics in the University of Paris. In this appointment the university has honored itself, for the individual is known throughout the world as one of the discoverers of radium. She is Mme. Marie Curie, who with her husband revealed the new element to the world in 1898. In 1900 she was appointed to take charge of all the advanced classes in the Superior Normal school at Sevres, being the first woman to hold a full scientific professorship in France. She now takes the chair which was filled by her husband at the time of his death two years ago. Radium was obtained by the Curies from pitchblende, after the most patient and exacting labors imaginable. Its most characteristic quality is its power of giving off heat radiations without combustion or chemical change, and without any appreciable decrease in its energy.

Combination Bank a Novelty.

One of the recent novelties patented is a combined clock and savings bank, designed by a Chicago man. Why a savings bank and a clock should be combined will not at once be apparent. The idea would seem ridiculous, as these two articles have no apparent relationship. The purpose of the inventor has merely been to increase the usefulness of the savings bank and assure that it will be constantly employed. He accomplishes this by requiring the deposit of a coin in the bank before the clock can be wound. Unless the coin is deposited the clock becomes useless. The amount of the coin deposited is controlled by the size of the slot in the savings bank. The number of deposits can also be increased by requiring a daily winding of the clock. In this way a certain sum must be added to the bank each day previous to each winding of the clock.
