Peter Prochaska was buried by Kolm Bros. out in the cemetery at the poor farm lest Wednesday. He was the county charge sent from Howells some two or three weeks ago. He was in the last stages of consumption and the inmates objected to his presence at the farm and was taken to Marzek's in the Thi d ward where be died. Two of his brothers came over from David City to dentify him as their brother, but were ot able to bury him and his body became a county charge.

Lest Saturday evening Schuyler and vicinity was visited by rain, hail and wind. The heavy winds turned into a real cyclone which did but little damage owing to the small momentum gathered. As far as we have had reports it was the worst out at George Watsons and the cemetery. It demolished nearly all of the out buildings at Watsons causing a damage of about $200. Out at the cometery Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Edgar, living in the country, were doing some work. When they saw the storm-coming they started to leave the cemetery. By the time they got into their wagon it was up ou them and dust and trash made it impossible for them to see where they were going. They struck one of the iron posts at the gate with such force that they were both thrown out and the horses loosened from the wagon by the tongue breaking. It is miraculous that neither Mr. nor Mrs. Edgar was seriously injured. They were taken home by one of their neighbors and after they had gotten over their fright were not much worse off for their experience. The cyclone seemed to divide which lessened its fury and at several other places only minor damage were done. After the wind spent its fury rain come, followed in some places by a large quantity of hail.

Two young girls from David City and one from Bellwood hung out their slumber shingle at a farm house in Alexis township Saturday night. The hired man, who always has been in the habit of turning a somersault into bed, was out until a late hour that night, so the girls thought they would play a joke on him. They fixed the slats of his bed so that they merely held up, covered them over nicely with the bed clothes and as usual the young man on returning, made his nightly hand spring, when down went everything with a thump, which was followed by a few words in Germannot his prayers. They also changed the hour of his slarm clock and made him get up before he scarcely had the bed warm. In fact he claims he put in a horrible night and next time city folks call on their country cousins he hopes they will know enough to not bother the Dutch.

This Mixed-Up World.

If things would not run into each other so, it would be a thousand times easier, and a million times pleasanter to get on in the world. Let the sheepiness be set on one side and the goatiness on the other, and immediately you know where you are. It is not necessary to ask that there be any increase of the one, or any diminution of the other, but only that each shall pre-empt its own territory, and stay there. Milk is good, and water is good, but don't set the milk-pail under the pump. MEN AND THEIR WOMEN FRIENDS. Sterner Sex Declared to Be Stupid in

Their Selections.

Chivalry is an old-fashioned word; but the thing itself, though less in evidence, was never so much in action as in our very own time. Men show it in their whole attitude toward their women friends. They handle our feelings with their lightest touch, they walk among our prejudices on tiptoe, they take off their hats to our bigotry if we call it religion; they accept our men, an' dat dey'll read every word of they grow gray before they discover that with certain women a fit of tears means no more than a fit of profanity from some men. They surely are patient in their own way. But neither can it be denied that in their choice of friends they are sometimes stupid to a heart-rending degree. In the main, an Anglo-Saxon's man's friends are as little of his choosing as the shape of his nose. One can runover the list in the dark. His family friends, his wife's friends, the wives of his friends. Then come the inconsiderable residuum (in size), the friends whom he has chosen for himself. Here will be where blunders will show, but the worst are like to be birds of passage. Perhaps he made them during his college days when the haze was over every pretty girl whom he met It is too much to expect a lad to pick the girl of really fine nature and sweetness. Nor does he; he admires the girl all the other fellows admire-a pretty flippant little creature who isn't afraid to talk (usually he is!) and can dance like a dream. But will men continue missy? I trow not.-Octave Thanet in Harper's Bazar.
