Be Square.

The young man who is tempted to depart from the straight path is apt to imagine that to get and spend stolen money is an easy way to live. But it is, in fact, the hardest way of all. The awful consciousness of guilt presses continually down upon the mind. There is a ghost of remorse and apprehension at every feast, a knife thrust of guilty consciousness in every moment of otherwise happy hours with those who love and trust the unworthy one, a silent but unbanishable companion of rebuke and condemnation in every time of solitude—the last thought at night, the first in the morning, the terrifying dream of troubled and disjointed sleep.—Indianapolis Star.

Poets' Wills.

Famous poets make interesting wills. Browning's was written in his own beautiful hand, with the initials of all the nouns substantive in capitals, after the olden use; and the attesting witnesses were "A. Tennyson" and "F. T. Palgrave." Matthew Arnold's, also referred to, was remarkable for its brevity. A baker's dozen of words were deemed enough: "I leave everything of which I die possessed to my wife Frances Lucy." This, however, because no executor was appointed, had to be set aside for letters of administration; but the result was the same. These two famous wills form, with Shakespeare's, the most notable trio perhaps ever handled by probate in England.

A Hopeless Case.

"Why don't you reprove your titled son-in-law for his reckless expenditures?" "Because," answered Mr. Comrox, "it's bad enough to see him wasting my money without wasting my time."

AT CHAUTAUQUA

NEED QUALITY OF PATIENCE.

Highways of France No Place for Pedestrian Who Would Move in a Hurry.

The highways of France are broad and shaded, her innkeepers neither exclusive nor intrusive; yet even here pedestrianism has its drawbacks. Chief among them are the railway crossings. The French system of protection against accidents is effective, no doubt, but if monsieur the Frenchman were as impatient a being as the American, the mortality would be little lessened, for the delay involved at these "traverses du chemin de fer" would choke with rising choler as many as might come to grief at an unprotected crossing.

On either side of the track is a ponderous "barriere," the opening and shutting of which would be slow under the best of circumstances. Being always tended by a colossal "barriere" (gate woman), who moves with the stately grace of a house being raised on jack screws, the barricade is unduly effective. Ten minutes before a train is due the barriere hoists herself erect, waddles across the track to draw the farther gate, closes the nearer one and, having locked them both, returns to the shade of her cottage. The train may be an hour late, but that is beside the question. This is the time that madame is hired to lock the gates, and locked they must remain until the train has passed. Woe betide the intrepid voyager who tries to climb over them, for her tongue is sharp and the long arm of the law is arrayed on her side.

VIOLIN EASILY AT THE HEAD

Peculiar Qualities Have Caused it to Be Crowned King of Musical Instruments.

Restricted as is its range of dynamics, the violin has had for its votaries men of such widely different temperaments as Paganini and Spohr, Willhelmj and Sarasate, Joachim and Tsaye. Its literature does not compare with that of the piano, for which Bach, Beethoven, Schumann, Chopin and Brahms have written their choicest music; yet the intimate nature of the violin, its capacity for passionate emotion, crowns it—and not the organ, with its mechanical tonal effects—as the king of instruments. Nor does the voice make the peculiarly poignant appeal of the violin. Its lowest note is the G below the treble clef, and its top note a mere squeak; but it seems in a few octaves to have imprisoned within its wooden walls a miniature world of feeling even in the hands of a clumsy amateur it has the formidable power of giving pain; while in the grasp of a master it is capable of rousing the soul.—James Hunker, in Everybody's.

Tea Table Etiquette.

Tea table etiquette was somewhat complicated in the days of that "hardened and shameless tea drinker," Dr. Johnson, when many people thought nothing of drinking ten or twelve cups at a sitting. It was considered proper for the cups and saucers of a party of tea drinkers to be all passed up to the hostess in one batch when replenishment was considered necessary, and in order that each person might be sure of getting back the right cup the teaspoons were numbered.
When the cups were passed up those who did not require any more were supposed to place the spoon in the cup. This writer remembers a very ancient dame teaching a small boy to place his spoon in his cup after the first cup had been emptied. He wondered for the reason. Now he knows that tea was once very expensive and little boys were not expected to ask again.

Trees as Educators.

More children are trudging along the country roads to the country schools than are walking on paved streets in cities attending the city public schools. There is a liberal education along the country road if only right use be made of right material. It is the writer's firm belief that the physical condition of the country schoolhouse and grounds must be greatly improved if we expect the early training of the country child will give it wholesome appreciation of all that is richest and best in country life. All this can be done with but small expenditure of money. Trees do not cost much, neither do flowers, vines and shrubbery. While the expenditure of money for paint is economy and the expenditure of money to make a schoolroom sanitary is humane.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Change of Evils.

Wife—"Do come with me to call on the Joneses; they'll make you feel perfectly at home." Husband—"Well, then, what on earth is the use of going?"

Instructive.

"Your friend is a literary authority is he? Has he ever done constructive work?" "No; destructive. He's a book reviewer."—Outlook.
